Ammoniated to reduce decay- Chlorophyll to stop mouth odor!

"DECAY BACTERIA" BEFORE AND AFTER IPANA A.C.

Never before Ipana® A.C. could you get complete mouth protection like this!

Now, for yourself and your children—protection against painful cavities! An end to unpleasant mouth odor for hours!

You get both with new IPANA A.C. because it combines cavity-fighting ammoniated ingredients with odor-destroying chlorophyll.

Take care of your gums. Brushing teeth with IPANA A.C. Tooth Paste from gum margins toward biting edges helps remove irritants that can lead to gum troubles.

Enjoy clean, bright teeth. IPANA A.C. polishes teeth sparkling bright and clean, too. It gives you a really attractive smile.

No ordinary chlorophyll or ammoniated tooth paste—no other type of tooth paste—can offer you and your family the kind of complete mouth care you get with IPANA A.C. Use it regularly after eating.

MOUTH-ODOR WORRIES ENDED FOR HOURS!

IPANA A.C. gives you the proved breath protection of active chlorophyll. In laboratory tests, it completely stopped mouth odors for hours in 9 out of 10 cases. And it leaves your mouth feeling wonderfully clean and fresh.

NO STAINING PROBLEM —DELICIOUS TASTE!

IPANA A.C. is specially made not to leave messy stains. It washes easily from tooth brush, towels, sink. And its new, more refreshing flavor was chosen by children as well as grown-ups in actual taste tests.

FINDS ALL GREEN TOOTH PASTES ARE NOT ALIKE

"I used to think all the green tooth pastes were alike," says Mrs. Fred Field of Darien, Conn. "But now I insist on IPANA A.C. because it's both an ammoniated and chlorophyll tooth paste. It makes me feel good to know that IPANA A.C. is so good for my family. And they all like to use it because of the wonderful flavor."

oh-oh, Dry Scalp!

"JEFF ALWAYS HITS the headpin just right, but he'll never make a hit with that head of unruly hair. He's got all the signs of Dry Scalp. Dull, hard-to-manage hair . . . and loose dandruff, too. He'll bowl 'em over, though, when he starts using 'Vaseline' Hair Tonic . . ."

*Hair looks better... scalp feels better...
when you check Dry Scalp*

GREAT WAY to start your day! A few drops of 'Vaseline' Hair Tonic a day work wonders. It checks loose dandruff and those other annoying signs of Dry Scalp because it supplements the natural scalp oils . . . gives your hair that handsome, natural look. Contains no alcohol or other drying ingredients . . . and it's economical, too.

TWO MOTHERS

Sirs:

On many occasions I've wanted to write to you, but I never did get around to it. I must write this time to tell you how deeply touched I was by your "Story of Two Mothers" (LIFE, Oct. 13).

DAPHNE JACQUES

Marquette, Mich.

Sirs:

. . . To tear an 11-year-old boy from his happy, loving parents, his dearest friends, and place him in a fatherless home in a strange country with a strange, poor, struggling mother is inestimably cruel. . .

ELLEN C. ROOD

Ann Arbor, Mich.

● However, Ivan was off to a good start on his new life. Yugoslavs welcomed him warmly at the railroad station (above) while his mother (right) looked on.—ED.

Sirs:

Mrs. Sirsch could relax knowing that the boy went to a mother who means well—other children stolen by the Nazis were gassed, shot or clubbed to death!

WALTER SCHWENK

New York, N.Y.

Sirs:

I worked three years for the French underground, escaped death a dozen times. My wife was living in a small village with my little boy; if the German S.S. had captured me, they would have deported and probably tortured and killed my wife too.

What a thought that American judges would seriously consider, only seven years after the common victory, that my child could be brought up by the very murderers of its parents!

Truly, the heroic shoemaker of Soštanj must have stirred in his grave.

FRANK S. DESSAYER

Glendale, Calif.

Sirs:

We who lived in Czechoslovakia in 1938 remember how the Nazi Sudeten Germans hated not only Czechs but also democratic Germans who refused to obey Hitler. One cold night in October 1938, Czech railway men brought to Prague a trainload of children of democratic Germans whose lives were threatened when Hitler occupied the Sudeten area. Warm clothing and toys were donated to those frightened children by a Czech Jew, who is now a DP in America. The head of the Prague welfare department, who housed and fed those youngsters, was Milada Horakova, whom the Nazis hounded five years in concentration camps and whom the Communists executed in June 1950.

"The Best Possible Telephone Service at the Lowest Cost"

Twenty-five years ago, on October 20, 1927, the Bell System put into writing, for all the world to see, the basic principles for the management of the business.

The policy tells the people what they have a right to expect from the company. At the same time, it commits everyone in the Bell System to a high standard of conduct for the business. The promise of "the best possible telephone service at the lowest cost" intensifies the effort to make that promise come true.

The never-changing policy of fair treatment for those who invest in the business, those who work for it, and those who use the service, will bring still greater progress in the years to come.

Responsibility to TELEPHONE USERS

"The fact that the responsibility for a large part of the telephone service of the country rests upon the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and its Associated Companies imposes on the management an unusual obligation to the public to see to it that the service shall at all times be adequate, dependable and satisfactory to the user.

"Obviously, the only sound policy that will meet those obligations is to continue to furnish the best possible telephone service at the lowest cost consistent with financial safety."

Responsibility to TELEPHONE SHARE OWNERS

"The fact that the ownership is so widespread and diffused (there are now more than 1,100,000 share owners of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company) imposes an unusual obligation on the management to see to it that the savings of these people are secure and remain so.

"Payments to share owners, limited to reasonable regular dividends, with the right to make further investments on reasonable terms as the business requires new money from time to time, are to the interest of telephone users and employees as well as share owners."

Responsibility to TELEPHONE EMPLOYEES

Many years ago, in its annual report to share owners, the company's responsibility to its employees was expressed in these words:

"While the Bell System seeks to furnish the public the best possible service at the least cost, the policy which recognizes this obligation to the public recognizes equally its responsibilities to its employees.

"It is and has been the aim to pay salaries and wages in all respects adequate and just and to make sure that individual merit is discovered and recognized."

Sirs:

Your picture of the Kemano power plant was of particular interest to me as I spent most of last fall testing the rock structure of Tahtsa mountain. As you have stated, the turbines within the mountain will be safe from aerial attack; however, the primary purpose in locating the plant underground is economic. By tightly concreting the penstocks into the mountain rock considerable support for these tubes is gained, permitting reduction in penstock wall steel amounting to several millions of dollars. . . .

This NEW $20 set of Norman Rockwell paintings is YOURS

FREE! Gratuit! Umsonst! GRATIS!

if you obtain a Trial Membership in The Heritage Club now

BECAUSE we are offering you a $20 set of Norman Rockwell's paintings as an inducement to obtain a Trial Membership in The Heritage Club at this time, we had better tell you something about them:

In the first place, they are not the original paintings in oil! If you are in position to pay several thousands of dollars to obtain one of Norman Rockwell's original oils (and if you know where one could be obtained), then you will not want these facsimiles.

For they are facsimiles. Yet we will wager one good sixty-cent dollar that, even after examining them, you wouldn't recognize them as such if we didn't tell you; and we will wager two good sixty-cent dollars that none of your friends will recognize them as such if you should hang them (the facsimiles!) on your wall.

They are created by several unusual processes. They are in full color; and they are on heavy board-canvasses such as oil painters use; and their surfaces are moulded so that you can feel the actual brush-strokes with your fingers.

Facsimiles have been created in this fashion before, of some of Norman Rockwell's famous paintings: notably his paintings of The Four Freedoms, the facsimiles of which have had so extraordinary a sale in the shops. We would present those to you, if we could! But we can't, for the right to reproduce them doesn't belong to us. However, we do have the right to reproduce Norman Rockwell's paintings made to illustrate Huckleberry Finn; for they were made for the now-famous edition published by The Heritage Press.

WE HAVE NOW taken three of them (the original oils are in the possession of the Mark Twain Museum) and have created facsimiles which are four times larger than the plates in the published book. Each of them is twelve inches across by sixteen inches long. Each of them is made to become a decoration on your wall of which you will be continuously proud. Each will be sold in the shops for $6.95; the set of three, for $20.

But we will give you a complete set free, GRATUIT, umsonst, GRATIS—if you obtain a Trial Membership in The Heritage Club at this time. Why?

WELL, IN THE FIRST PLACE, we have persuaded the mills which produce our fine papers to increase their allotment to us—with the result that, of six of our recent publications, we have obtained from the printers about a thousand extra copies. So, in the second place, we have decided to take in one thousand new members: to try the Club out for just six books.

But we want to enroll this limited number of people with an even more limited expenditure upon expensive advertisements such as this one! We want to cut down our advertising expenditure by offering this irresistible inducement to you, to become one of these new members. If you do, you will during the coming six months obtain six beautiful, beautiful books—at the same price as ordinary rental library fiction.

You will obtain a copy of The Pilgrim's Progress with the newly-discovered paintings of William Blake reproduced in full color; and The Book of Ruth illustrated with the magnificent miniatures-in-color by Arthur Szyk; and Great Expectations illustrated by the English painter Edward Ardizzone; and Confessions of an English Opium-Eater illustrated with gravures by Zhenya Gay; and The Way of All Flesh; and The Sketch-Book of Geoffrey Crayon illustrated by Gordon Ross.

Or, if any of these books should not be of interest to you, you may choose substitutions out of a long list of other Heritage books-in-print. Then, after the trial period, you can decide whether you want to continue your own membership. Obviously, we think you will!

FOR THE MEMBERS of The Heritage Club regularly come into possession of those "classics which are our heritage from the past, in editions which will be the heritage of the future." Yet each of these books—because of the cooperative nature of the Club's system—costs each member only $3.65! or only $3.28 if payment is made in advance!

A Prospectus is now ready. You are invited to send for a copy. One of the remaining Trial Memberships will then be reserved for you until you have had time to study it—and your reservation will also be entered, for the complete set of Norman Rockwell Huckleberry Finn facsimiles which will be yours. Never in the history of book publishing has a greater bargain been offered to wise buyers of books. The coupon below enables you to put this statement to the test:

Reservation Coupon

THROAT ROUGH?

What a difference a week can make...
when you switch to a Kaywoodie Pipe!

Jury of throat specialists confirm medical laboratory report:

"Kaywoodies are the Throat-Easiest Smoke of all!"

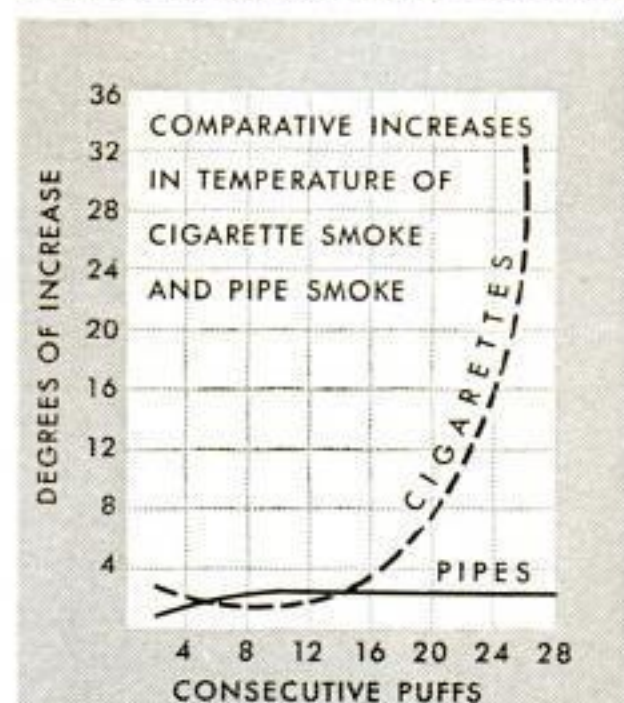

As far back as 1929, doctors knew that hot smoke is harmful...that irritating nicotine and tars increase as smoke temperature rises. Here are the latest facts, as revealed by painstaking laboratory research, and checked by throat specialists:

Kaywoodie cuts down nicotine and tars
Smoke from cigarettes and cigars contains much more harmful nicotine and irritating tars than smoke from Kaywoodie Pipes. 300% and 400% more!

Kaywoodie is the coolest-burning pipe
Tests comparing Kaywoodies with 34 other pipe brands prove that Kaywoodie with its 3 exclusive Throat Guards gives the coolest smoke...containing far less tars, resins and carbon particles!

Get the throat-easiest smoke!
Convince yourself! Smoke a Kaywoodie. Notice how huskiness and rawness (and, in many cases, coughs due to smoking) disappear. Switch to a Kaywoodie today!

PROOF: Kaywoodie burns cooler... REASON: 3 exclusive Throat Guards

Solid line shows how Kaywoodie Pipe rises only one degree in temperature... dotted line shows how hot cigarette smoke gets. It rises 35 degrees during same length of time... reaching 115 degrees!

Wide-opening bit diffuses smoke... helps cool it down.

Drinkless device makes smoke cooler, traps tar-laden slugs.

World's best briar... heat-resistant, porous for cooler, sweeter smoking.

From $4 to $25 in wide variety of shapes

A JESUIT CONVALESCES

Sirs:

LIFE readers who may recall the story of the Jesuits released from a Chinese Communist prison ("Burial above Ground," by Eugene E. Fahy, S.J., LIFE, Sept. 8) may be interested to know that Father William D. Ryan, S.J., the most physically incapacitated of the three, is well on the road to recovery.

We recently had the pleasure of renewing Father Ryan's acquaintance when some 200 of his former students at Loyola University of Los Angeles gathered to welcome him back to Southern California. The ironic fact that the gym was decorated with a Chinese setting didn't dampen Father Ryan's spirits, his amazing memory for first names or his well remembered sunny smile.

Father Ryan has been convalescing in Santa Barbara and will shortly return to the Orient to take up his missionary duties.

Sirs:

I was greatly impressed with "Life Goes to a Bar Mitzvah" (Oct. 13). I felt an individual pride, for I have known Rabbi Novoseller personally for many years. Your magazine hit the newsstands on Hoshanah Rabbah, the final day of the seven weeks of penitence during which, traditionally, God designates who is to be included for the coming year in His Book of Life. When I visited the rabbi and showed him his picture in LIFE, he remarked, "Well, I'm glad I made the deadline!"

Thanks to LIFE and Mr. Williams for the fine article about "sleep" and "pep" pills ("To Sleep: Perchance . . ." by Richard L. Williams, LIFE, Oct. 13). ### BEREA COED

Sirs:

The article, "Coed from the Hills," is definitely not a true picture of the students of Berea.

To begin with, we are definitely not paupers.

We do not pretend to be fashion leaders but we do resent your comment that "Berea students seldom dress up." We have social dancing on Wednesday and Saturday nights and we do not usually go to these barefooted and attired in overall pants and gingham shirts.

MME. CHIANG, ARTIST

Sirs:

When I was on Formosa last February Madame Chiang showed me her paintings (Speaking of Pictures, LIFE, Oct. 13). She told me she found much satisfaction in painting with Chinese brush and ink, for it was a creative hobby and it helped her to forget the annoying neurodermatitis which has sent her again to this country for treatment. Nor did her hobby prove a waste of time, for she found she could dictate while she painted, or hear reports from secretaries.

GERALDINE FITCH

Leonia, N.J.

NASH FAMILY NAMES

Sirs:

Some time ago LIFE went to the wedding of the daughter of Ogden Nash (Oct. 29, 1951); her name, I believe, you spelled "Linell." Am I right in pronouncing it Li-nell? We named our baby daughter that, after reading your article. We thought of it as a contraction of "Little Nell." Now I have a friend who insists the pronunciation is Li-nell. Please set us straight.

MRS. HUGH BROWN

Rosebud, Alta., Canada

● Ogden Nash says: "First syllable, as in East Lynne, second as in what Uncle Joe will take if you give him an inch. Accent on second. It's a family name, not a telescoped Dickens job. Some day Linell's new daughter, Linell Nash Smith, will thank me for clearing this up."—ED.

Indoor Plants Easy to Grow in Treated Soil

Krillium* soil conditioner helps winter garden hobbyists get
"green thumb" results

ST. LOUIS—Thanks to a great new chemical aid, even inexperienced garden enthusiasts can get satisfying professional results with house plants this winter. Krillium, a Monsanto product now available at garden, hardware, and department stores everywhere, is making news as the only time-tested soil conditioner in existence.

Krillium stabilizes soil in tiny, porous clusters that help store water for gradual absorption. Seeds and bulbs germinate faster . . . Krillium aerates the soil, lets oxygen reach down to plant roots. Easy to handle. Results are apparent immediately in improved soil structure.

Use dirt from your own back yard
No need to buy fancy mixtures. Simply work Krillium into the soil already in your pots, or make new potting soil out of plain back-yard dirt. Krillium will keep the soil crumbly, easily workable, and much more receptive to water.

Nothing like it

Four years of field tests in every soil and climate of the United States have made Krillium the standard against which other conditioning agents are measured. Not a fertilizer, it does not feed crops or plants. You still must give your plants adequate food, water, and sunlight. But in soil treated with Krillium, plants have opportunity for faster, stronger and more fruitful growth.

Two sizes

Buy Krillium at your local dealer's throughout the United States and Canada. Try the new 1-lb. canister for house plants . . . $1.69
Convenient 5-lb. package for indoor and outdoor use—lawns, gardens, shrubs. $6.95
Also in full-strength Loamaker* formula for large areas.

SPOILING YOUR FUN?

Make your old TV better than new with a
G-E ALUMINIZED TUBE!

● The 'frost is on the pumpkin' . . . and that means more and more of your time spent warmly indoors—comfortably enjoying television. What better time to correct a weak, faded picture in your old set? Whatever the make—a G-E aluminized tube installed in your new set now means the picture will be Better Than New—brighter, clearer, sharper. Call your General Electric serviceman today.

CALL YOUR G-E SERVICEMAN NOW!

Name a convenient time when he can come and give your TV set a complete check-up. He will service your TV promptly and expertly. He'll put "new life" into your set without upsetting your household routine.

HE'LL BE THERE PROMPTLY

Quickly, and at reasonable cost your G-E serviceman can make your TV Better Than New when he installs that G-E Aluminized Tube. Remember, the G-E Aluminized Tube is backed by a registered factory warranty.

BEFORE YOU KNOW IT...

You're watching a TV picture that's far clearer and sharper than the day you bought your set! No more hazy, washed-out pictures that strain your eyes. Your G-E serviceman is prepared to make your TV picture Better Than New in a matter of hours. General Electric Co., Tube Dept., Schenectady 5, N.Y.

MAKE THE
EYE-OPENING
CHANGE FROM ← THIS TO THIS →

A NON-ALUMINIZED TUBE gives you greyed-down blacks, murky whites. That's because much of the light shines back into the interior of the tube. The wasted light degrades the picture. Contrast is weak. Definition poor. Viewing is hard on the eyes.

THE G-E ALUMINIZED TUBE increases picture brightness up to 100%. A reflecting aluminized film behind the phosphor screen mirrors all the light toward you. Result: blacker blacks, whiter whites. Sharp, easy-on-the-eyes contrast. Excellent definition.

You can put your confidence in— GENERAL  ELECTRIC

Packard Power Is

Master Motor Bu

● Embodying the world's highest precision standards, powerful new J-47 Turbo-Jet engines are coming off Packard production lines for the Air-Force's new performance ace, the B-47 Boeing Bomber.

● Proud inheritor of Packard's master motor-building experience, the famous Packard Thunderbolt Engine that powers today's great Packard motorcars is engineered to outperform, built to outlast them all! Ask your Packard dealer for a demonstration.

A Matchless Background Of Experience In Motor Building Plus Traditional Packard Craftsmanship Assure You Of A Superlative Engine In The Packard You Buy Today!

ON LAND, sea and in the air, Packard power is writing brilliant new pages in motor development!

● Now coming from the production lines are the greatest engines Packard ever produced—superb new Packard Thunderbolts for Packard motorcars—spectacular new jets of tremendous power for the American Air Force's B-47 bombers—powerful marine engines for the Navy, including new Diesels of outstanding performance.

● Master motor builders since 1899—during three American wars—Packard produces the world's finest motors. It has designed and built every known type of internal-combustion engine, from one to 24 cylinders—each custom fitted to its job.

● During World War II Packard produced 55,523 Rolls Royce engines—more than five big British companies combined! What's more, these engines were built with such precision that all 14,000 parts were interchangeable with those made in England!

● Packard's leadership as "master motor builders of the air" began with the revolutionary 12-cylinder Liberty engine of World War I and continues today in the execution of critical government defense contracts for aircraft engines. In World War II, Packard became the world's largest producer of Rolls Royce aircraft engines in a gigantic drive to boost American and British airpower.

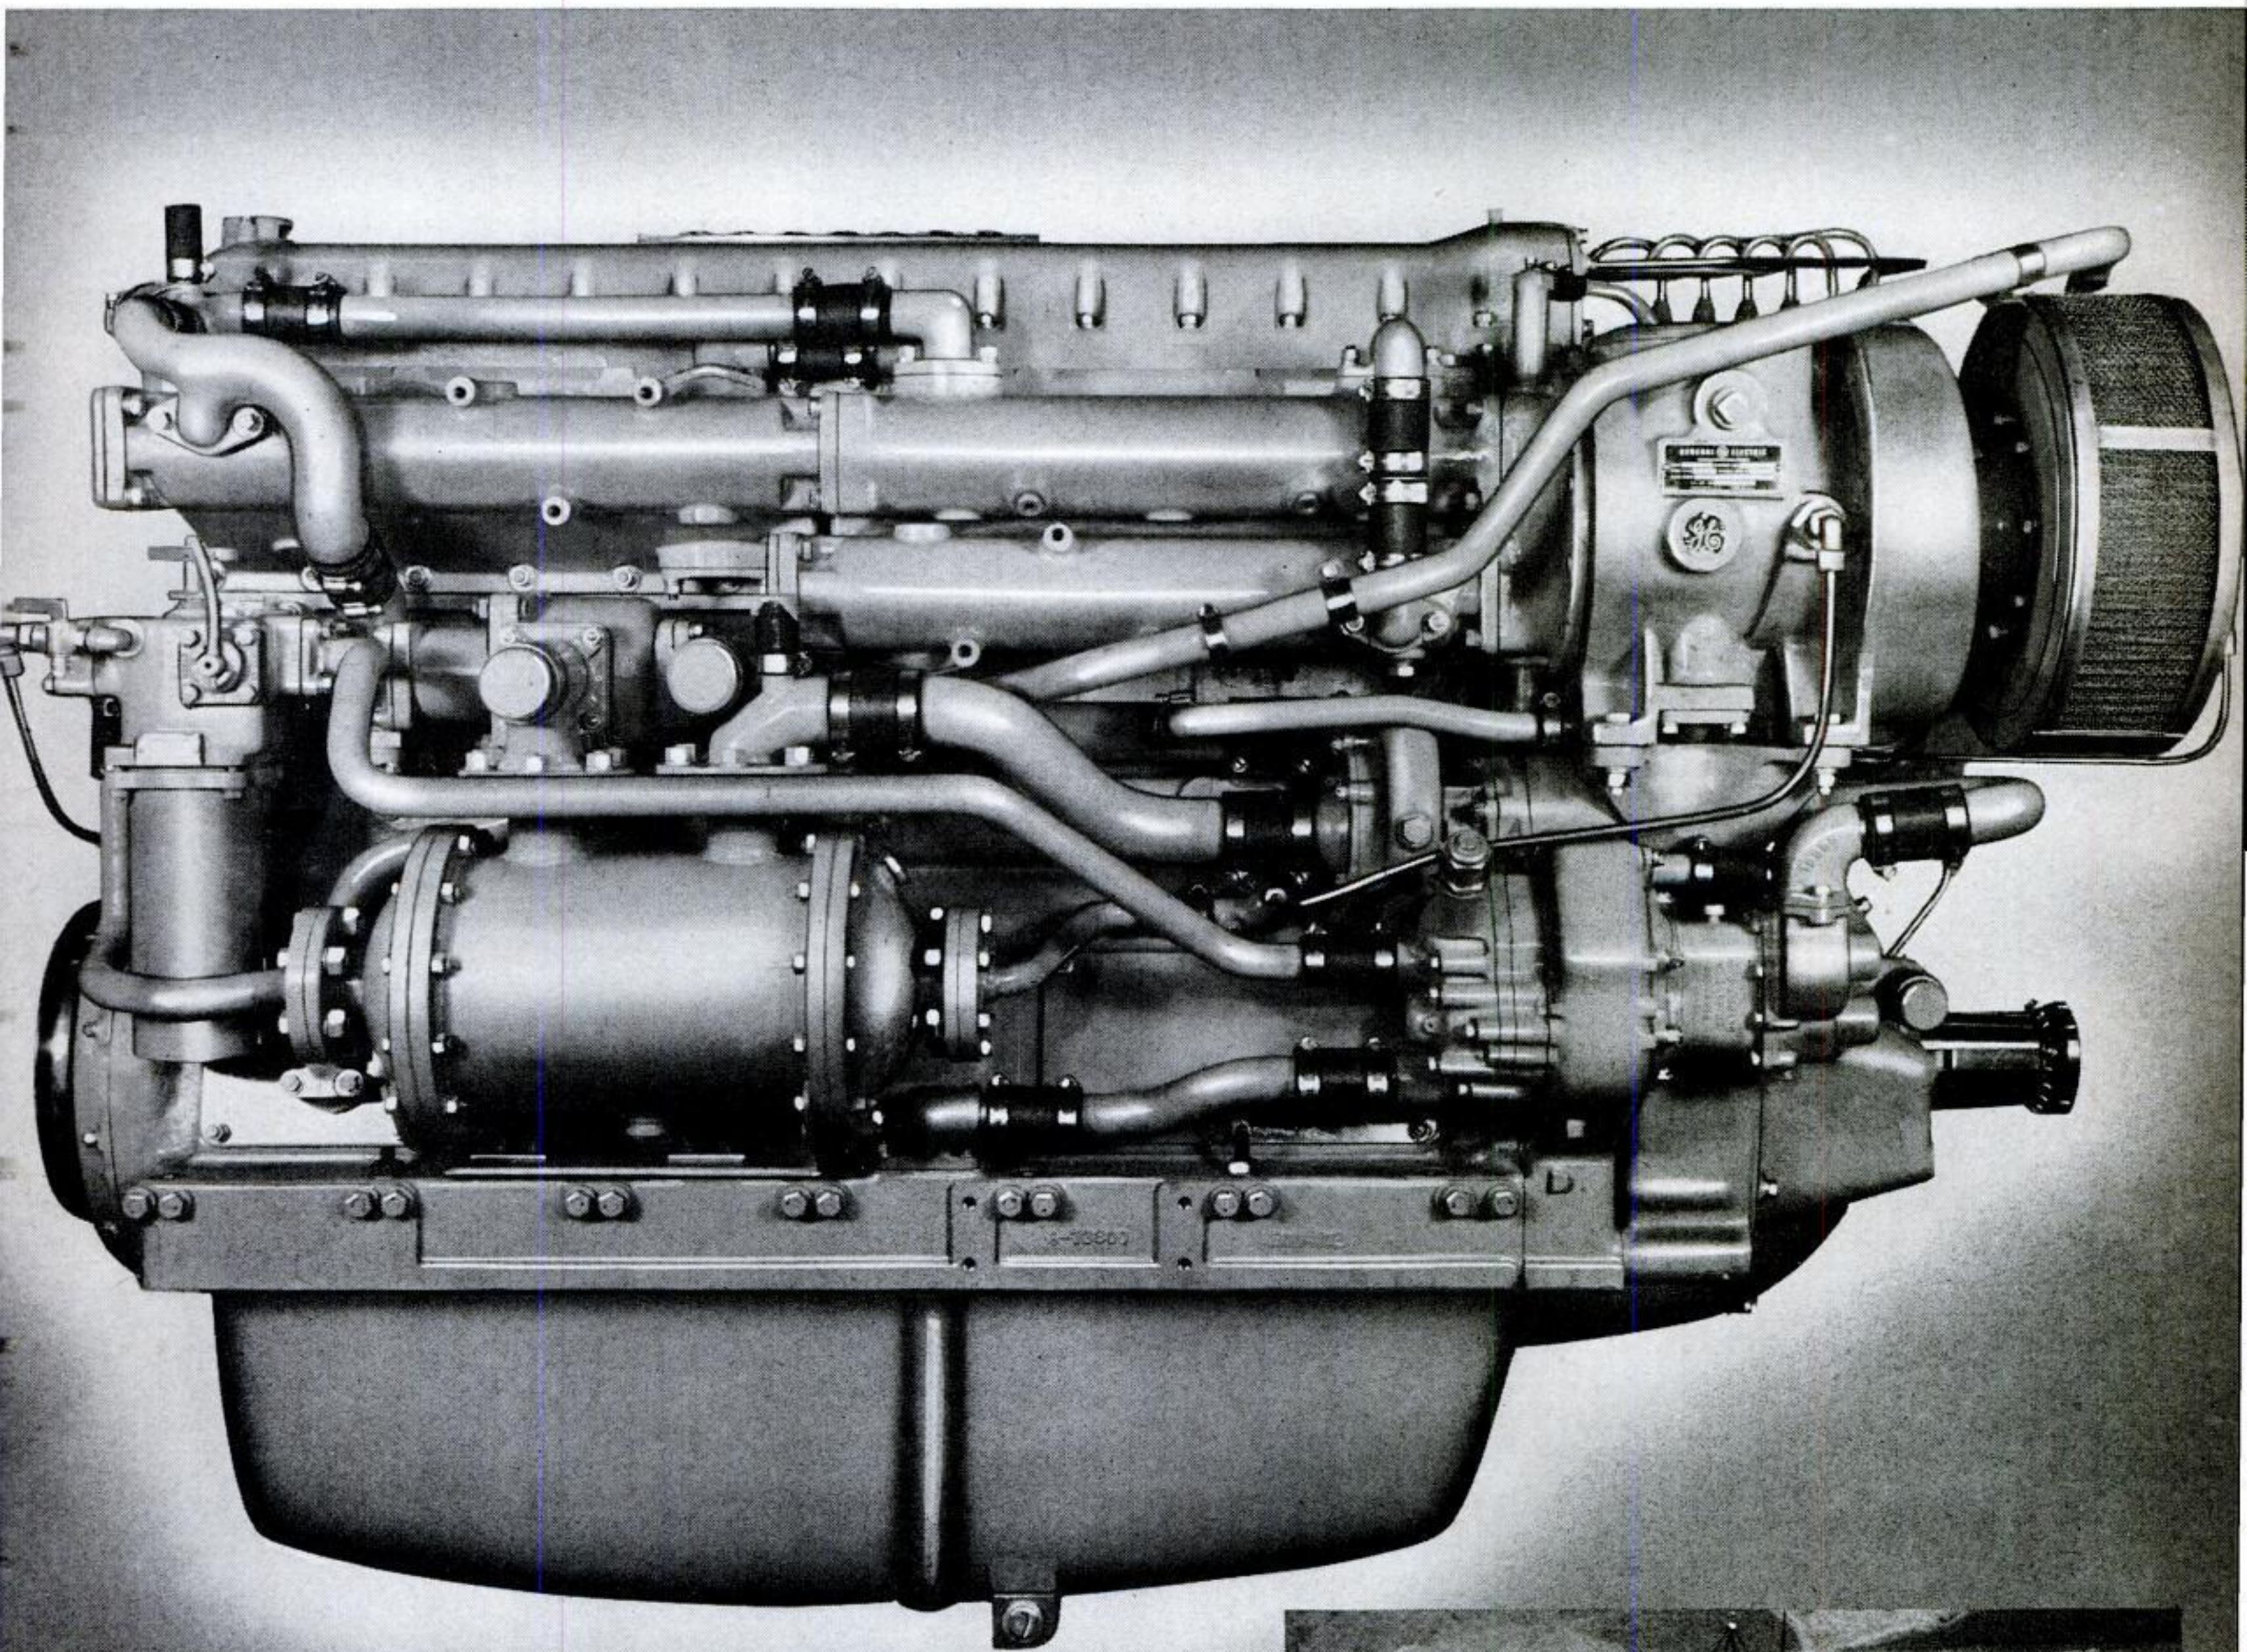

● Exclusively powered by Packard, the Navy's fabulous PT boats made unparalleled war records. With their phenomenal power and phantom-like speed, these hard-hitting craft created a successful new type of David-and-Goliath warfare in the South Pacific.

● The first American car to travel faster than a mile a minute was built and powered by Packard in 1904. And the first American V-type, 12-cylinder engine was the famous Packard "Twin-Six," introduced in 1918. Packard automobile engines have been proved in every kind of trial from the brilliant speedway campaigns of Ralph DePalma's record-breaking Packard racers to cross-country endurance runs and constant grueling tests at the mammoth Packard Proving Grounds. The rugged stamina and reliability of these great engines are shown by the fact that more than 53% of all Packard cars built since 1899 are still in use!

Making History

Builders Since 1899

● This all-aluminum engine is the lightest diesel ever built. It weighs only 5 pounds per horsepower instead of the usual 15 or 20! Designed and produced by Packard for the Navy in 6-, 8-, 12- and 16-cylinder models, it is another great naval contribution by the company which supplied all of the engines for the famous PT Boats of World War II.

SPEAKING OF PICTURES

These show some half-pint Hopalong
all trying to be quickest on the draw

For fledgling range riders and gangbusters around Dearborn, Mich., the YMCA Men's Club each year puts on a children's gun-drawing contest as part of a money-raising barbecue. Contestants start with hands at sides, draw at the cry of "Shoot!" and are timed by an electric gauge connected to a microphone before them.

Of this year's 48 entries, only a few brought their own shooting irons, but all brought a knowledge of hip shooting and "fanning" motions (using the free hand to flick back the hammer) which bespoke long hours of watching TV and movies. To the chagrin of male entrants the winner was a girl, 12-year-old Linda Knowles (opposite), who drew in the amazing time of 0.12 second. Said Linda, who had not practiced for the event, "I was shaking all over, which is what made me win."

New lamp bulb destroys odors

THE MEMORY LINGERS ON but not in the room or drapes when you use ODOROUT to destroy the stale odor of smoke.

THE MEMORY OF A MEAL won't be in the air for hours with an ODOROUT fixture on your kitchen wall.

Now you can boil cabbage, or fry fish, and not have their odors haunt you for hours. An ODOROUT lamp clears odors from your kitchen, the way Nature does outside. For like a summer storm, ODOROUT makes ozone from the natural oxygen in the air. Ozone destroys odors.

ODOROUT operates electrically. You have no chemicals to replace, no artificial scents in the air. And you can leave it on day and night. It costs only a nickel a week to use, and the bulb lasts six months.

Because ODOROUT works on low voltage, it needs a special fixture. You'll find a variety of fixtures on the market, one to suit your kitchen, living room, nursery, closet, cellar, game room, or wherever you want odors destroyed.

RAW EGG ON BYSTANDER'S COAT, "FRIED EGG" ON A WALL, "ADAM" BY EPSTEIN, A LOTUS IN THE MAKING AND DOORKNOBS AT THE U.N.

STRANGE SHAPES IN EGGS, ART AND NATURE

There has been a good deal of talk about eggs recently but until last week, when a partisan threw one at Harry Truman (he missed), not much had been done with them. We are less intrigued by the political fact of the egg-throwing than by the egg itself, or rather the shape it now finds itself in.

In a sense, the man who throws an egg is imposing a new form on an old structure. He is creating a new shape, which may or may not be pleasing to most people (particularly the target), but which is bound to be interesting. This is precisely what many modern artists, using different materials and less violent skills, are trying to do. Taxicab critics have characterized such efforts as Fernand Léger's U.N. mural (above) as "fried egg art," and Collector Truman has added an ingredient and termed them "ham and eggs art." Although it seems likely that Truman could get even more votes for this viewpoint than he got in 1948, in Britain Sculptor Jacob Epstein —whose art was denounced as obscene a few years ago—is now enjoying popularity and respect (pp. 65-70).

Egg-throwers are seldom applauded and artists often are criticized for "distorting nature," but nature actually is the greatest shape-changer of all. Consider the picture second from right, above. This curious, cracked oval is a 2,000-year-old lotus seed now in the process of a radical change into a lovely flower (pp. 60, 63). As a pictorial magazine, LIFE is naturally interested in new shapes and forms, both in nature and in art.

We are aware that it often takes years for people to become sufficiently accustomed to new shapes to accept them casually; the pattern made on a coat by a thrown egg may never become popular. On the other hand, the two half eggs (above, right) that form doorknobs in one of the new U.N. buildings (pp. 113-119) seem to provide more amusement than offense.

STRAIN OF CAMPAIGN IS EVIDENT AS EISENHOWER SPEAKS AT NEW LONDON, CONN.

IN CLEVELAND SPEECH STEVENSON'S FACE IS TAUT AND DRAWN

HELL-FOR-LEATHER IN THE STRETCH

A little old lady pressing close for a look at a presidential candidate last week suddenly found herself caught up in the arms of the law (left). Millions of the little old lady's fellow Americans were caught up in the campaign, not physically, as she was, but emotionally. The emotions grew deeper and the passions were more and more involved as the presidential campaign of 1952, nearing the moment of decision, broke out into a fierce fight for votes.

All political inhibitions vanished and no charge was too dirty to be aired. The campaign took on a dark and bitter hue and in the angry charges and countercharges the temper and mood of the candidates changed too.

Adlai Stevenson, whose early wit and eloquence made him seem detached and almost remote from the voters, was now meeting the electorate face to face. In one day he made 14 whistle stops, the first one as early as 7:15 a.m., and if he did not match Harry Truman's harangues in vehemence and vigor he too was rousing the crowds. Frequently they called to him, as they did to Truman, "Pour it on," and pour it on he did.

The general, whose critics once fatuously accused him of running like "a dry creek," was proving one of the most adept whistle stoppers in campaign history. From the start he had never really drawn a bad crowd—and at the end of a long campaign his drawing power was greater than it had been at the beginning. Although once he had avoided the direct attack on his opponents, he was now putting his shots directly on the target. Often hard hit, he was regularly giving back blows as hard if not harder than he had received.

For all the bitterness, for all the strain so evident in both men's faces (above), they liked campaigning. Said Adlai, "It is an exhilarating and humbling experience." Said Ike, "It is gratifying because it takes you into every nook and cranny and you meet America."

Now as the climax neared both candidates carried their offensive into those states which controlled the big and decisive blocs of electoral votes. In New York City in what would be the biggest rally of his whole campaign, Eisenhower was to bid for that state's critical 45 votes. Stevenson, after holding his big rally in New York, was to conclude his campaign in Chicago, seeking his home state's bloc of 32. But the campaign would be fought down to the last minute on all fronts, for a state-by-state survey of the election prospects (pp. 41-44) showed that many states were still in doubt.

SOME TAKE SIDES AND SOME SWITCH SIDES

If the voices of the presidential candidates were loud in the land, the voices of their supporting cast were louder still—and considerably more shrill. In the chief character roles of the last act of the campaign, President Truman seemed to be campaigning mostly for his own record, while Governor Dewey of New York campaigned most vigorously against Harry Truman.

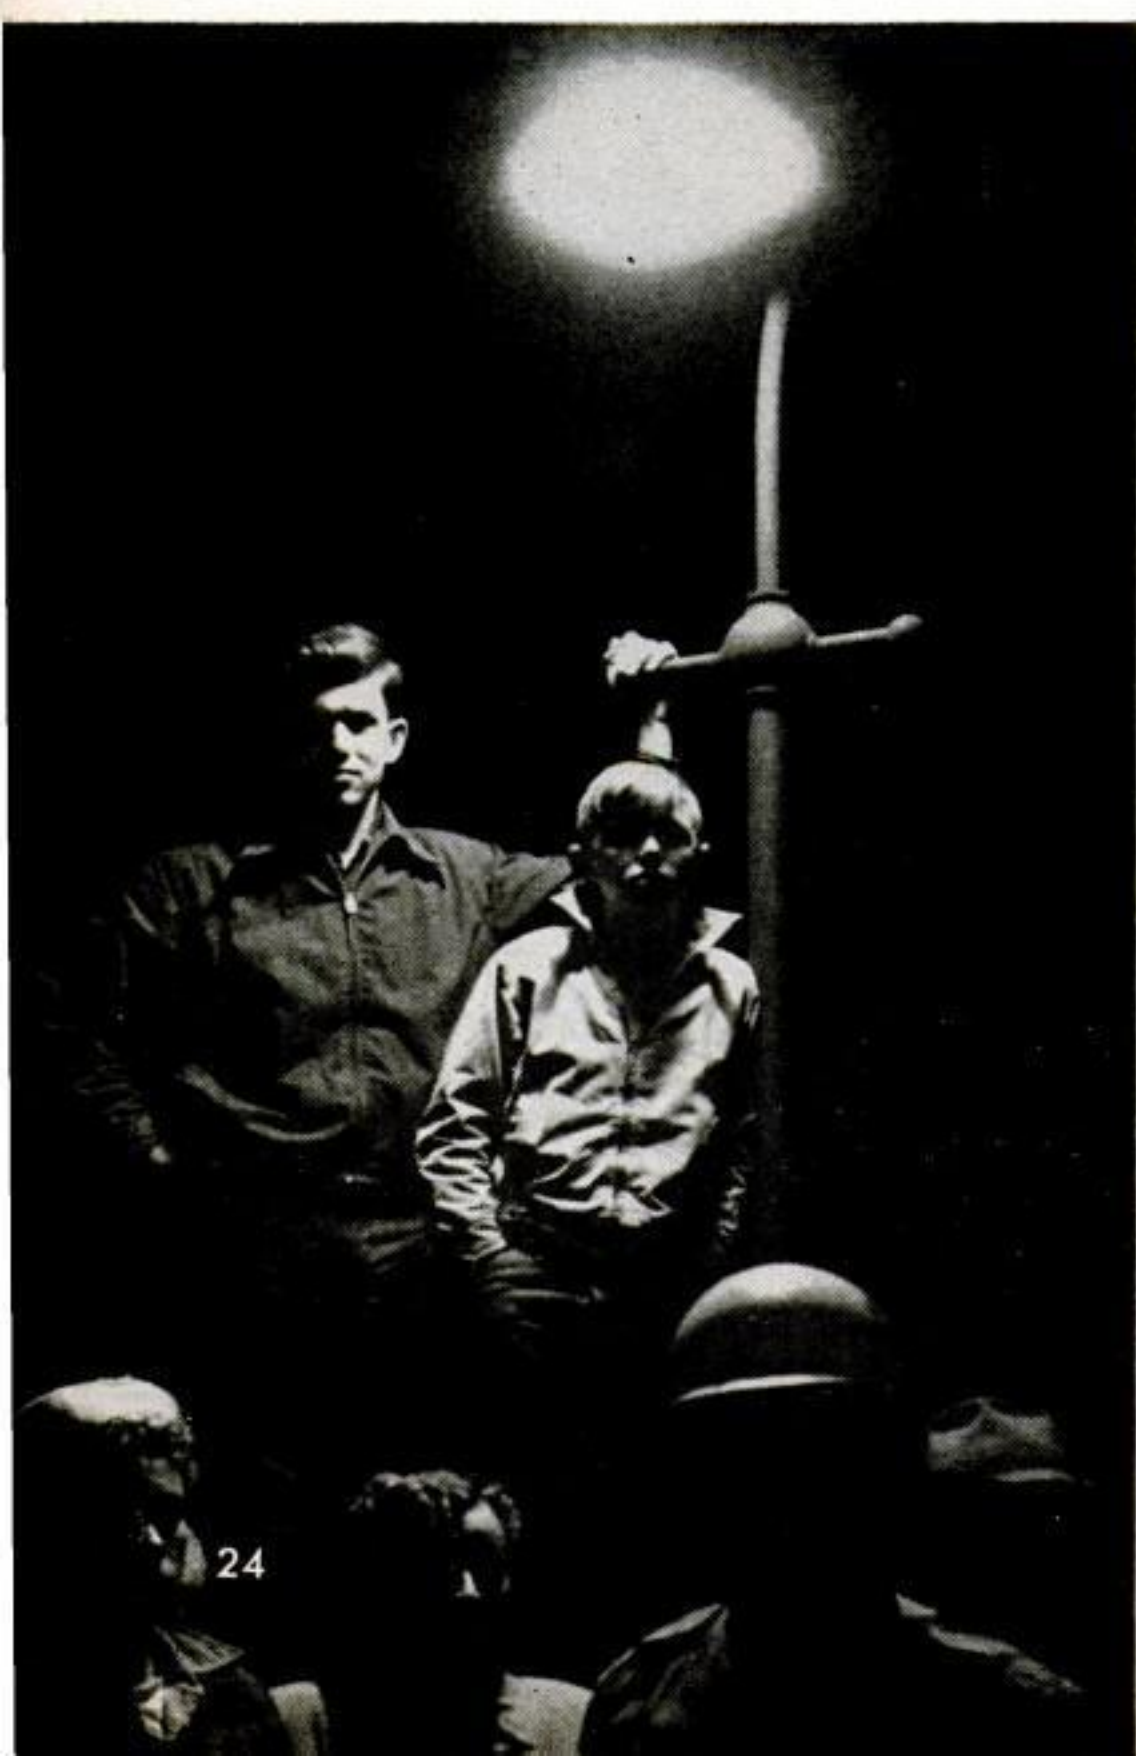

With his daughter Margaret, whom he described as "my second best assistant," the President rode a circuit through the industrial cities of the Middle Atlantic States, attacking the Republican "big lie" that the Truman administration had been "soft in fighting Communism," and bragging about his own record as a champion of labor and civil rights. Less virulent than he had been, he was still barbed enough to label Eisenhower as a "fancy double-talker" who said different things in different parts of the country.

Dewey, abandoning the aloofness of his own 1948 campaign, let go while introducing Ike to a rally in Troy, N.Y. Truman and Stevenson, Dewey said, had made "an unholy bargain behind the barn—who shall pick up the manure and throw it, and who shall run for president."

Around the chief actors rose a chorus of side-taking and some side-switching (above, Republicans are on left; Democrats on right). A former Truman Secretary of War, Royall, and the daughter of Democratic Presidential Candidate Al Smith announced for Ike. The sons of Franklin D. Roosevelt split. James and Franklin Jr. stayed Democratic but Elliot and John were for Ike. Their mother was for Stevenson and so, after a change of mind, was her former daughter-in-law. Republican Senator Wayne Morse came out for Stevenson and read himself out of the party "which has gone so wrong."

The No. 2 men on the tickets seemed mostly concerned with their throats. John Sparkman spent part of the week in Bethesda Naval Hospital with laryngitis. Richard Nixon, his opposite number, whistle-stopping across Iowa to crowds that sometimes outnumbered those greeting the presidential candidates, told audiences how he preserves his own throat. "If you watch closely you will see that I stand very close to the mike," he said. "That's my only form of medication."

IKE VOLUNTEERS TO MAKE TRIP TO KOREA

Ike Eisenhower rolled off on the last lap of his campaign in a chilly unseasonal snowfall, but it was not long before he had added some warmth to the air. Whistle-stopping in New England and New York, Ike was really mad. Sometimes red-faced with anger, sometimes bitter with scorn, he denounced President Truman's accusations of antisemitism and anticatholicism. He called the Democrats "bearers of false witness." He said theirs was a "campaign of fear," and condemned their tactics as creating "mistrust, disunity and bigotry." The Truman administration, he said, had added a slander-a-day to its scandal-a-day reputation.

This fighting talk went over well with the crowds; on Boston Common, 75,000 cheered him. But it was in Detroit that he made his week's most telling speech. There, choosing the Korean war as the number one issue, he pinned the responsibility for U.S. withdrawal on the Administration and said it would be too much to expect the present Administration "to repair what it had failed to prevent." Solemnly pledging a single goal—to end the Korean war as soon as possible—he told the people he would step up psychological warfare and the training of South Korean forces and that his first step would be to go to Korea himself.

ADLAI SAYS THE ANSWER LIES IN MOSCOW

Adlai Stevenson teed off for his last round in Chicago in a TV "fireside" speech. He and his strategists were emphasizing Communism to meet Republican attacks that he was weak on this issue. Communism, he said, must be halted, "not by an international giveaway program," but by a strong and firm U.S. which should take the lead in world trade and political stability. He slapped at Ike, saying the general was "kidding" voters by offering an easy way to end war, but his tone was sedate and fatherly. Whistle-stopping eastward, he changed his style at Buffalo. He lit into Ike's "strange crusade," saying it looked "more and more like a raid," and that, where housing, national resources and social security were concerned, he would not trust the G.O.P. as far as he could throw an elephant.

It was in Cleveland that he made his most successful speech. Clarifying his relationship with Alger Hiss, he said that, as a conscientious lawyer, he had no choice but to testify that Hiss's reputation, at the time he knew him, was good, pointing out that John Foster Dulles—and Ike, by association—were, at that time, in much the same boat. Of Ike's offer to go to Korea, he said, "The root of the Korean problem does not lie in Korea. It lies in Moscow."

HOW A WHISTLE STOP APPEARS TO THE STOP

The number of whistle stops the two presidential candidates have made between them totals about 350. To the reporters on the campaign trains the stops tend all to look alike: a sea of eager people swarming over tracks alongside an unprepossessing depot. But to the whistle stop itself, the candidate's appearance is a distinctive, almost historic occasion—as it was to the town of Lyons, on the New York Central's main line in upstate New York.

Planning for the visit—in Lyons' case it was the Republican candidate who was coming—started three weeks ahead. Because the stop was to last only a few minutes, no elaborate celebration was possible. But welcome signs were printed and sound trucks sent out to tell folks how to behave. Special arrangements had to be made with the New York Central, whose trains at certain times speed through Lyons every four minutes, to stop its traffic.

On the morning of the big day, a railroad crane hauled away some debris from the station. The crowd began assembling at noon. Fifteen carloads of loyal party members arrived from a neighboring county. By 1:30, when the train came down the tracks the crowd had swelled to about 4,000. There were cheers, then louder cheers as the candidate came out to talk. An apple grower who had a box of apples to give the candidate waited hesitantly to make the presentation. When "apples" were mentioned in the speech, someone said, "Now, now," but the platform gate wasn't open and the chance was lost. When the speech was over, the apples were finally handed up and a box of the local roses given to the candidate's wife. Then the engine started up, the candidate shouted "Goodby, folks," and a couple of kids, who hated to see the moment of glory end, chased down the track after the train.

AS TRAIN PULLS IN, the crowd swarms around the engine, shouting for the candidate. Police try unsuccessfully to check people with ropes. Engineer waves crowd back as he moves slowly forward.

CITY EMPLOYEE who usually repairs the streets came to depot to put up a rope to hold back crowd.

MISPLACED CAR parked too close to tracks is pushed out of way by police and civilian assistant.

BOX OF APPLES is held by Mark Buckman who waits for opportunity to give them to the candidate.

DURING THE TALK the crowd moves in on rear platform to get a good look. Train has 18 cars, including sleeping cars for candidate, his staff and the press.

AS TRAIN PULLS OUT, the candidate stands on platform and two children run after him. Little girl at right kept running for several blocks before giving up.

THE VISIT OVER, police remove signs. Many citizens, including children, had made their own crude posters, tacking them onto branches or broomsticks.

THOUGHTFUL CROWD of 11,000 in Cleveland Arena heard Stevenson make one of his most serious speeches. In it he hit back at those who had criticized him for testifying on behalf of Alger Hiss. Some seats were empty, but 3,000 people, who could not get in because of a mixup over tickets, waited outside.

CHEERING CROWD of 14,000 in Buffalo's Memorial Auditorium heard Ike blast Democrats as "rabble rousers." As he finished a flock of balloons was sent up from the floor over the demonstrative crowd. It was the kind of tumultuous ovation both candidates could expect to get in the campaign's concluding week.

FOR A STATE-BY-STATE ESTIMATE OF VOTING PROSPECTS SEE PAGE 41

'HE HAS COME THROUGH THE TRIAL, HIS GREAT QUALITIES OF LEADERSHIP PROVEN

Before we all vote, there is just time to reflect on the campaign as a whole, the issues it has raised and obscured, and the embittered slugging of its last weeks. So far as possible, the conscientious voter should remember his best reasons (and forget his worst) for voting for Ike or Adlai, and make sure these reasons still stand up.

A thumbnail history of the campaign would go something like this. At the beginning the Republicans had all the issues: Korea; corruption and Communism in government; inflation; desire for a change. By nominating Eisenhower, a hero of the free world, they also disarmed misgivings about the Republican party's past parochialism. If change was possible as well as desirable, this looked like the year.

By nominating Stevenson, the Democrats did what they could to "me-too" two Republican issues: corruption and the need for a change. The other issues—Korea, Communism, and inflation—they sought to neutralize. They said these were not issues and anyone who blamed them on the Democrats instead of Stalin was an isolationist. Beyond that, the Democrats relied on "prosperity" to return them to power.

It soon became apparent that Stevenson's "high level" management would not meet the Republican strength disclosed by the polls. This strength was partly a popular protest against the Truman-Acheson record and partly a popular enthusiasm for Eisenhower the national hero. The next Democratic tactic, therefore, was two-fold: to start a backfire protest vote against more controversial Republicans, especially Taft and Hoover, and to start dismantling the prestige of hero Eisenhower and cut him down to size.

Truman took charge of this phase of the campaign, using every trick in the manual. Stevenson followed suit in his politer, double-negative way. Truman's virulence naturally elicited an equal and opposite virulence from some Republicans. It was during this phase that wits were lost, issues distorted or sunk without a trace, and serious damage done to the national sense of reality.

For example, the Republicans, with a perfectly good case to make against the Administration's softness toward Communism, distorted it by making too much of Stevenson's character deposition on behalf of Alger Hiss. On the Democratic side, Truman broke some kind of record by trying to make Eisenhower appear antisemitic and anticatholic. But even intelligent Stevensonians stooped to scare tactics—for example Beardsley Ruml in a speech last week implied a resemblance between Eisenhower and the aged Hindenburg, who was duped into letting Hitler take over.

One useful thing about these excesses is that they show where our political neuroses lie. Obviously the Republicans are more worried about domestic Communism than the Democrats are; and the Democrats are more worried about some dangerous form of reaction. Surely the Democratic worry is the more fanciful. It is especially silly when directed against the whole Republican party, which represents about half the American people. Democrats and liberals who profess to fear Republican reaction are like those Republicans who, in the days of the Bloody Shirt, thought any Democratic president would revive secession. It took an actual Cleveland administration to lay that ghost. It will apparently take an actual Republican administration to explode this modern liberal obsession. For that reason, if no others a Republican victory is an indispensable step toward more political sanity and realism.

But there is more food for reflection in one other consequence of the campaign. One of America's greatest human assets, the internationally admired and nearly faultless hero, General Eisenhower, has been subjected to a barrage of calculated disparagement. This Democratic tactic really paid dividends. Seldom in history has so shining a figure been so abruptly and thoroughly shod with clay and clad with mud.

Only a year ago so good a Democrat as Paul Douglas proposed that Eisenhower be nominated by both parties as a kind of second Washington. Now the President calls him morally blind, Stevenson associates him with "spiritual treason" and many eggheads profess disillusionment in the once-admired man. It seems a miracle that Eisenhower, until subjected to this exposé by politics, could have fooled so many people as to his true character. As the Rocky Mountain News suggests, is it not up to Truman to explain how an Eisenhower could ever have infiltrated the Defense Department?

We offer a simpler hypothesis. Ike has not changed. Instead, American politics has been invaded by a born strategist who has learned a very great deal about this new art in a very short time.

Beginning with his tough preconvention campaign, Ike has been exposed to more politics in four months than most men see in a lifetime. It has been brutal, but just consider his summer's accomplishment. He has worked as hard and as intelligently for victory (which is the purpose of a political campaign) as any Republican candidate in living memory. He has made nearly 200 speeches, short and long, good and bad, and milked every major issue for all it was worth. He has revolutionized the politics of the South and prepared its return to the two-party system. He has brought a greater measure of unity to the Republican party than it has known in years. In breeding this party unity he has enhanced, not diminished, his own central role; and if he wins he will be in the best possible position to direct its policies. His tactics have guaranteed that if he wins (though not if he loses) he will become "Mr. Republican."

These are extraordinary accomplishments, those of a born leader. Their price has been a considerable loss of Eisenhower's prestige. But as Wendell Willkie used to say about sovereignty, prestige exists to be used. Ike has so used his prestige that if he is elected he will recapture all of it and more, and enter the White House with more prestige than any new president ever.

For the point about Ike's prestige is that it has always been earned. He has repeatedly proved himself to be not just a good general, but a great American. This is a hard thing for his contemporaries to realize or admit about any great man. They usually leave it to the historians. In Ike's case, however, there is at least some contemporary evidence of his greatness. This is the testimony of other public figures whose judgment commands respect, and who have judged him.

Eisenhower today is the same man whom Winston Churchill called "one of the finest men I ever met." Francis Cardinal Spellman described him last fortnight as "the man of our generation to whom America entrusted the guardianship of its most precious possessions—our liberties and our youth; a man known and respected throughout our country and throughout the world, a general who has a place among the all-time great men in American history."

He is the same man to whom the late Senator Arthur Vandenberg wrote, "I am one of those who deeply believes in you," and of whom Vandenberg also wrote, "I think that General Eisenhower will help to put us back on the main track of collective security in the Western world."

AND A TOUGH CAMPAIGN

ANEW AND TEMPERED FOR A FRESH CAREER OF SERVICE TO THE U.S. AND THE WORLD'

Bernard Baruch wrote to Ike: "Since I have known you as a major, I have grown to respect and admire your character, ability, gentleness but firmness and above all the high purposes that have motivated you in all circumstances. Your abhorrence of cant, hypocrisy, intolerance in all fields of human relations have brought affection with respect and admiration. I remember so well your many talks on your soldiers . . . your first consideration—their welfare . . . and your love of our beloved country, its constitution, and institutions. I remember best your statement to me that whatever betides . . . you will never do anything for which your conscience will trouble you."

One of the first Republicans to interest Ike in the presidency was the farsighted businessman and former ECA chief, Paul Hoffman. Said Hoffman last week:

"Eighteen months ago I made up my mind that it was of extreme importance that Dwight D. Eisenhower be persuaded to accept the nomination of the Republican party. I had three reasons.

"First, I felt he could take us further and faster along the road to peace than any living man. Second, he could do more to restore total integrity to government. Third, I felt he could give . . . a new and distinguished leadership.

"Today for these reasons I feel even more strongly that it is of extreme importance that Eisenhower be elected president. He has come through the trial, his great qualities of leadership proven anew and tempered for a fresh career of service to the U.S. and the world."

Many a lifelong Democrat has succumbed to Ike's qualities. Lewis Douglas, ex-ambassador to Britain, says, "It is because I believe he will satisfy the highest specification of a public official's attitude toward public responsibility that I shall vote for and support Dwight D. Eisenhower." John W. Davis, Democratic candidate for the presidency in 1924, says, "The general's career gives proof that he can bear great responsibility, that he does not shrink from making important decisions and that he possesses such tact in dealing with other men that he can draw together discordant groups in the pursuit of a common end. This adds up . . . to high executive ability and leadership, than which nothing is more needed in the presidency at this time."

Ex-Secretary of War Kenneth Royall says he will cast the first Republican vote of his life for Eisenhower because "I have never known a man with more patriotism, more judgment, a fairer approach—nor have I ever seen any officer, civilian or military, who was nearly his equal as an executive or administrator." The former director of the WACs, Texas Democrat Oveta Culp Hobby, says: "I have known General Eisenhower for 10 years. I have never known a man who is a more natural diplomat . . . You cannot work with or be with General Eisenhower without realizing you are with a man of amazing capabilities, tremendous integrity and a down-to-earth philosophy that is rare in famous men." Al Smith's daughter, Mrs. John A. Warner, says that her father "would have seen in General Eisenhower the world's best hope for crushing Communism." The eminent Virginia historian, Douglas Southall Freeman, has already given in LIFE (Sept. 22) his eloquent reasons for supporting Ike: "The great powers of the office were, indeed, fashioned for great presidents, great in character, in decorum and in ideals. . . . Eisenhower . . . is worthy of the presidency."

These and other Democrats for Ike are joined by many prominent independents. Says the president of Williams

College, James Phinney Baxter III: "The idea that Eisenhower is a captive is a phony born of Democratic desperation. . . . Eisenhower's prestige, judgment, experience and proved administrative ability would be priceless assets in the White House." Says Novelist John P. Marquand: "History has already proven that General Eisenhower has served his country far more selflessly and more effectively than any Democratic politician who is now busy attempting to defame his character. His . . . ability to assume leadership in a time of crisis, as well as his stature and broad understanding, make him far better for the presidency than Adlai Stevenson." The former dean of Columbia College, Harry Carman; pioneer of American adult education, Dr. Alvin Johnson; the novelist, Mary Roberts Rinehart; and the revered bishop of the Methodist Church, Herbert Welch, are among those who "believe that General Eisenhower through his wise and resolute leadership can secure unity among the people of the U.S. and of the free world, the only effective insurance of peace; and we urge his election."

Let us conclude this testimony with a few more witnesses from Ike's own party. It is one measure of his genius that he has united the deepest convictions of its conservative center with those of the liberal Republicans of both coasts. For instance:

Katharine Lenroot, daughter of the late Wisconsin senator and former chief of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor: "General Eisenhower has demonstrated throughout his life the qualities of leadership, steadfastness, courage and personal integrity that our country must have in its president."

Mrs. Hiram Cole Houghton of Iowa, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs: "No one can begin to equal Ike's personal qualifications for leadership. He comes from the great Midwest, the heart of America, and from the middle class, called the balance wheel of America. He will give us integrity, dignity and stability in our government. We can trust our destinies to Ike."

Charles P. Taft, president of the National Federation of Churches and candidate for governor of Ohio: "I learned to respect him in personal contacts growing out of my job in the State Department in 1944-45. In trying to get industrial materials for France . . . I received my main support from Eisenhower in Europe who showed a deep understanding of the economic and human aspects of the problem."

Governor Arthur B. Langlie of Washington: "Eisenhower is . . . a man of real character which makes possible the effective leadership which he has always given. One of his greatest assets, in my judgment . . . is his ability to unite people who should be working together to achieve great objectives. And in this period of our country's need, it seems to me that there is nothing more important than a leader who can unite us instead of dividing us."

Governor Dewey of New York: "With Eisenhower as president, I make the flat assertion that Stalin would not dare launch World War III. . . . [Eisenhower] knows the world problem and how to handle it. . . . He will make a great president."

Governor Warren of California: "There is . . . no American living today who is capable of giving the leadership General Eisenhower can give to the cause of peace."

It is not often that American voters have had a chance to elect a proven great man as their president. And there never was a time when they stood in greater need of one.

MURDER BY THE MAU MAUS

Kenya natives use violence and voodooism to terrorize the British

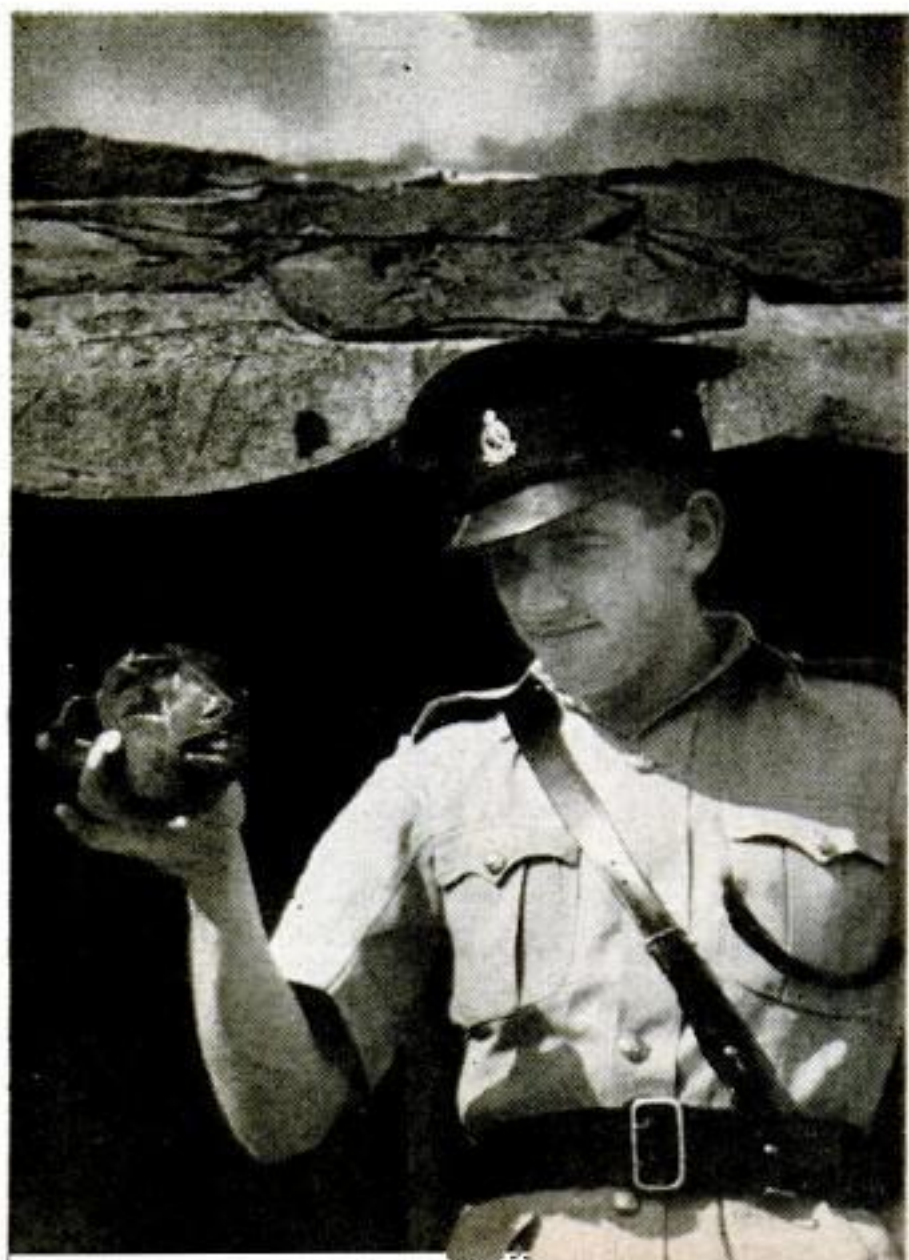

In the language of the Kikuyu tribe in Kenya, Britain's agricultural colony in East Africa, mau mau is variously translated as "do it quickly" or "the hidden ones." The words now designate a secret Kikuyu society, half nationalistic, half voodooistic, fiercely dedicated to driving the white man out of Kenya.

Although tension between whites and blacks has been rising in recent years, the Mau Maus did not declare open warfare until this summer. Since then, in an outburst of terror and intimidation, they have killed more than 40 persons, raided farms, burned buildings, mutilated livestock. On Oct. 7 the Mau Maus machine-gunned and murdered a senior Kikuyu chief, Waruhiu wa Kungu, who cooperated with the British rulers. The British replied by giving Waruhiu the biggest funeral in the colony's history. Two weeks later the Mau Maus used long knives to hack to death another native chieftain. Britain rushed troops from other parts of Africa to restore order and arrested

Jomo ("Burning Spear") Kenyatta, London-educated leader of the Kenya African Union who is suspected of master-minding the reign of terror.

As in South Africa, nobody expected an easy solution of the deeply rooted racial problem. Many British admit the Kikuyus have some genuine grievances against the whites, who moved in on Kenya in the early 1900s, taking over the fertile highlands, crowding the Africans into less desirable areas. Though the Mau Maus embrace the modern concepts of national independence, they go back to a primitive voodooism to gain their ends. They use magic symbols, bloody rites in which animals are disemboweled, irrevocable oaths to kill or to die themselves. The trouble in Kenya, commented one English newspaper, was that the old tribal customs and disciplines of the Kikuyus had been destroyed with nothing to take their place except "the doctrine of white supremacy which inspires and justifies . . . despair."

DUCHESS AMONG THE DYAKS

Sartorial splendor of Sarawak greets Marina on imperial travels

In one relatively tranquil corner of the earth the British Empire was still carrying on last week at the colorful old imperial stand. Marina, Duchess of Kent, Queen Elizabeth's 45-year-old aunt, flew to Sarawak in Borneo, where the white man's burden was picked up by James Brooke, the "white rajah," in 1841. With the majestic complaisance expected of duchesses, she opened a police headquarters near Jesselton, laid the foundation stone of a new cathedral in Kuching, visited a college at Batu Lintang and received blowpipes and coconut bowls from tribal leaders at Sibü.

Everybody came out to greet the duchess—Sea Dyaks and Land Dyaks, Chinese and Malays, Melanaus, Muruts, Kenyahs, Kayans and Kedayans—wearing all possible combinations of local and occidental finery. Borne aloft in royal litters, toasted with rice wine, shaking hands with eager thousands, the duchess, who had already gone through similar procedures in Malaya, received with unfailing and uncomplaining grace every welcomer no matter how grand or scant his costume.

STATE-BY-STATE LOOK AT VOTING PROSPECTS

Fortunately for the democratic process, election predictions—whether by pollsters, politicians or pundits—are little more than informed guesses. But guesses give a clue to trends, and LIFE here presents estimates on the presidential election from the best Republican and Democratic sources (anonymous because the estimates of the strategists vary greatly from the less realistic official party claims). R stands for Republican, D for Democratic and they are followed by comments based on reports from our own correspondents. Where all agree, no partisan estimates are given.

ALABAMA—11 VOTES

- R "Democrats for Eisenhower," showing great enthusiasm, hope to "squeeze out" a victory.
  - D Traditional party is confident. Governor Persons predicts that Stevenson will win by a 4-to-1 margin.
- Stevenson all the way.*

ARIZONA—4 VOTES

- R Though registration is 3 to 1 Democratic, Ike will win by at least 10,000 margin.
  - D Stevenson will win a "normal victory"—i.e., carry the state by at least 10,000 votes.
- Unofficially both parties agree with reporters and political analysts that anything can happen.*

ARKANSAS—8 VOTES

Still "Stand-pat-Democrat."

CALIFORNIA—32 VOTES

- R Though it is close the state is leaning definitely to Ike.
  - D Says a Stevenson stumper: "A week ago I felt we were close. Now I think we'll win."
- Both sides are right in calling it close. A doubtful state.*

COLORADO—6 VOTES

- R New registration and known dissatisfaction on the opposite side will give Eisenhower an edge of 55%.
  - D Stevenson will hold all of Truman's votes which carried state for Democrats in 1948.
- Republican organization active and much improved which does help Eisenhower.*

CONNECTICUT—8 VOTES

- R A 53% victory, with a margin of 25,000.
  - D Most hopeful estimate: victory by 10,000.
- Ike should have an edge.*

DELAWARE—3 VOTES

- R This state will cast about 160,000 votes. It is expected 53% of these will go for Ike.
  - D Stevenson is gaining and polls show him pulling more votes than did Mr. Truman.
- The odds favor Eisenhower.*

FLORIDA—10 VOTES

- R Early enthusiasm for Eisenhower campaign has been maintained, indicating real support.
  - D The state has been traditionally Democratic and Stevenson's campaign has taken hold.
- The election could go either way.*

GEORGIA—12 VOTES

- R Eisenhower activity is strong in the cities, represents new birth of G.O.P. enthusiasm.
  - D Governor Herman Talmadge, who is state's undisputed boss, says Stevenson by 200,000.
- Talmadge should know.*

IDAHO—4 VOTES

- R A landslide for Eisenhower if the undecided vote goes the Republican way. Ike is clearly ahead.
  - D Stevenson has a chance and he will win by several thousand.
- Leaning toward Eisenhower.*

ILLINOIS—27 VOTES

- R Ike will hold Stevenson in Chicago, win with pluralities in rural downstate.
  - D The Chicago machine will more than overcome Ike's rural advantage.
- Too close to call.*

INDIANA—13 VOTES

- R Their most "respectable guess" gives Ike a majority of 90,000 to 100,000 votes.
  - D Their hope is that industrial Lake County will tip scale for Adlai.
- Should be safely Eisenhower.*

IOWA—10 VOTES

- R Best party sources expect a 54-46 victory.
  - D Stevenson by 52½ to 47½%.
- Very close. Ike leading.*

KANSAS—8 VOTES

Ike's home state is sewed up—for Ike.

KENTUCKY—10 VOTES

- R With a popular Senate candidate, John Sherman Cooper, the Republicans feel they have a chance.
  - D Truman polled 57% of the vote in 1948 and Stevenson should do as well.
- Barkley's help saved Adlai.*

LOUISIANA—10 VOTES

- R Democratic Governor Kennon says Eisenhower will get 250,000 Democratic votes.
  - D Regular Democrats counting on heavy Negro vote but admit race is nip-and-tuck.
- It could go either way.*

MAINE—5 VOTES

Maine will go as it usually has gone—Republican.

MARYLAND—9 VOTES

- R Ike will win by at least 50,000.
  - D Adlai will win by at least 50,000.
- Others say Ike leads.*

MASSACHUSETTS—16 VOTES

- R The state chairman says Eisenhower will get 55% of the votes and carry most of the independents with him.
  - D The race is a close one, but Stevenson is now ahead and is expected to gain ground on his visit there.
- Democratic for the last six times, this year it is doubtful.*

MICHIGAN—20 VOTES

- R Top party leaders are confident Ike will carry the state by 150,000.
  - D Conservative Democratic leaders rate Stevenson's prospects about 50-50.
- Republicans may be overconfident; Democrats overpessimistic, but Ike has edge.*

MINNESOTA—11 VOTES

- R A party estimate gives Ike a sure margin of 25,000.
  - D Confident Stevenson supporters are talking of a 100,000 vote victory.
- It's close.*

MISSISSIPPI—8 VOTES

- R Eisenhower has a 50-50 chance.
  - D Stevenson should win by a 60% margin of the popular vote.
- Stevenson should take it.*

MISSOURI—13 VOTES

- R A tight race, with victory possibly decided by five votes per precinct.
  - D A shoo-in for Stevenson, with a predicted plurality of 135,000.
- The Democratic machine is battered but not broken.*

MONTANA—4 VOTES

- R "We do have at least a 50-50 chance."
  - D "Adlai by the 20,000 Truman had in 1948."
- Eisenhower has a chance, Stevenson should cop.*

NEBRASKA—6 VOTES

- R Ike should carry the state by a greater margin than Dewey did last time.
  - D Stevenson by a narrow margin because Mid-western farmers are leaning more and more to Democrats.
- As of now, a safe Republican state.*

NEVADA—3 VOTES

- R Fifty-five percent for Ike, 45 for Adlai.
  - D Fifty-two-and-one-half percent is best estimate for Stevenson.
- A three-vote jackpot for Ike.*

NEW HAMPSHIRE—4 VOTES

No indication that this Republican stronghold will break with its G.O.P. tradition.

NEW JERSEY—16 VOTES

- R Ike will carry New Jersey by 150,000 or more.
  - D Leaders privately concede that G.O.P. is now out in front but believe Stevenson will close strong.
- Ike seems certain of victory.*

NEW MEXICO—4 VOTES

- R Ike's personal popularity will triumph over normal heavy Democratic registration.
  - D With 3-to-1 edge in voters party is confident Ike's appeal is waning.
- Close, but looks like Ike.*

NEW YORK—45 VOTES

- R Heavy registration upstate indicates Ike will win by 150,000 votes.
  - D Ike's upstate majority will be held to 700,000 votes, pro-Democratic New York City will tip the scales.
- No one can predict outcome here.*

NORTH CAROLINA—14 VOTES

- R Best informed leaders say Eisenhower's personality gives him "an outside chance."
  - D They feel Stevenson will win by a margin of from 150,000 to 200,000 votes.
- Looks safe for the Democrats.*

NORTH DAKOTA—4 VOTES

Republican as a California-bound wheat farmer.

OHIO—25 VOTES

R "It's in the bag."

D "It can go either way and will be very close."

Taft's support should win it for Ike.

OKLAHOMA—8 VOTES

R Says the G.O.P. chairman, confidently, "We are definitely out in front—Ike by 30,000."

D The Democratic chairman thinks that Stevenson will win by at least 100,000 votes.

The Democratic hopes seem realistic.

OREGON—6 VOTES

R Despite the Wayne Morse switch, the G.O.P. believes that Ike will get 54% of vote.

D The party is counting on Morse to draw thousands of independent voters to Stevenson.

Ike should have enough votes to offset switch.

PENNSYLVANIA—32 VOTES

R Cities are conceded to Democrats, but rural areas will give Ike more than he needs.

D City margins will be enough to offset the admittedly Republican countryside.

Ike definitely has the advantage.

RHODE ISLAND—4 VOTES

R Reorganized party has hopes of carrying the state for Eisenhower by 25,000.

D They are certain that state will give Stevenson "a large majority."

Best independent guess: Stevenson with help of Providence.

SOUTH CAROLINA—8 VOTES

R Independent Democrats (there is no Republican activity as such) are claiming state by 52% margin.

D Edgar A. Brown, state chairman: "Stevenson by a margin of more than 2 to 1."

Eisenhower campaign is effective. The issue is in doubt.

SOUTH DAKOTA—4 VOTES

R Party officials believe Ike will get 58% of vote.

D Relying on good farm conditions and the anti-Ike rural pacifist vote, state Democratic leaders give Stevenson a victory margin of approximately 1,800 votes.

Ike should win.

TENNESSEE—11 VOTES

R Eisenhower chances have been improving, boosted by his visit to the critical Memphis area.

D Senatorial Candidate Albert Gore says Stevenson ought to carry this normally Democratic state by 45,000.

Stevenson is obviously the best bet, but Eisenhower's gains give him a chance.

TEXAS—24 VOTES

R Ike's campaign director: "Eisenhower is beginning to roll. Undecided voters are now coming over."

D Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn and Senator Lyndon Johnson say flatly that in spite of Democratic defections Texas will stay loyal.

Eisenhower now leads in all of the state polls, having come from behind in the last few weeks. As in Louisiana, the election here could go either way.

UTAH—4 VOTES

R Eisenhower should win by some 16,000 votes. At present state polls show him leading, one by as much as 16% with only 8% of the voters undecided.

D Stevenson should carry state by same margin as Truman in '48 or about 54%. His visit here greatly helped campaign.

The Republicans should carry the state, but the margin may be closer than they think.

Dentists prefer rolling! But, however you brush, you'll brush better with a Dr. West's Flexite, the first brush made which recognizes the fact that all people don't use a toothbrush properly.

Dr. West's Flexite "takes" your hand and guides it to correct brushing.

Its handle invites your fingers to roll it properly over the teeth (down over the top teeth, up over the lower ones). Its bristles flex just right to clean quickly, powerfully, yet gently.

Of course, you can "scrub" with the Flexite, too.

It's a better scrubber than other brushes. Ask your dentist about the Flexite, a great, new toothbrush.

WHAT THE LAST-MINUTE POLLS SHOW; WHAT EXPERTS SAY ARE KEY STATES

From the start, Eisenhower led all polls and still retains that lead. But in the last month Stevenson has consistently gained. In the Gallup poll of Oct. 23, the count was Eisenhower 48%; Stevenson 39%, undecided 13%. But when Gallup allocated the undecided vote on the basis of the way the vote went in 1948 (2 to 1 Democratic), he found Eisenhower 53% and Stevenson 47%. When the undecided vote was allocated according to economic, religious and educational status the result read Eisenhower 52%, Stevenson 48%.

Crossley has not published a national poll since Sept. 12 when the figures were Eisenhower 45.6%, Stevenson 40.2%, undecided 13.7%. His latest polls are for states. In New York he found that Eisenhower was leading with 46.1%, Stevenson 41.3%, undecided 11.2%. After Crossley had allocated the undecided, they were even. In Illinois Crossley found: Eisenhower 43.3, Stevenson 42.4, undecided 13.9. In allocating the Illinois undecided, Crossley put Stevenson ahead by 5.3 percentage points.

All polls and estimates agree that General Eisenhower now has a better chance to win this election than any G.O.P. candidate in 24 years. But never has any election induced so much caution. There are many contradictory trends. Heavy registrations indicate a record vote. In the past five presidential elections a big vote has usually indicated a Democratic trend. But an older tradition was that a heavy vote meant a protest vote—in this case against the Democrats. Does the newer or older pattern now hold?

No sure answer can be forthcoming. At times General Eisenhower's enormous popularity might seem to indicate the possibility of a Republican landslide. But all experts agree that three states with large electoral votes—New York, California and Illinois—remain in doubt. Of these three New York, with its enormous bloc of 45 electoral votes, may well determine who attains the 266 votes required to win the presidency. If Stevenson carries New York and holds the South he can afford to lose both in Illinois and California. If Eisenhower fails to carry New York he would have to win in both Illinois and California—except if he carried the 24 votes of Texas and one other state in the South.

470 LOCAL ELECTIONS WILL DECIDE THE NEW PRESIDENT'S CONGRESS

While the running totals of electoral votes will add up to a new U.S. president, the less conspicuous state-by-state congressional battles are determining what sort of government this president will have to work with. This year, as every second year, all 435 House of Representative seats are up for re-election. The Republicans now consider they can safely count on 178 seats. To win even a bare majority, they must pick up 40 more. For a working majority, they should add 10 or 20 more. The areas where they hope to do this are shown in the map at the right. But though G.O.P. representation in the House has been climbing steadily from 104 in 1936 to 200 at present, the party still has an uphill job. The faithful southern states regularly hand the Democrats 115 seats. This advantage would be neutralized by a strong Ike victory—traditionally the incoming president brings with him control of the House.

The Senate situation is different. The Democrats now have the upper hand, 49-47, and of the 35 seats now on the block only 15 are Democratic. Seven of these are already safe and a Stevenson victory should assure him a Democratic majority. But, in all likelihood, Eisenhower could be sure of party control only if he won in a landslide. The critical battles to decide this are listed below.

WHAT G.O.P. MUST WIN to control House are seats in the 40 critical districts shown in red dots. If they go Republican, these districts should give the party a majority of one. To gain working majority, G.O.P. should add around 20 of tossup districts shown by black dots, where they face harder fight.

THESE ARE DISPUTED DEMOCRATIC SENATE SEATS

Among the 15 Democratic Senate races (in one case a Republican holds an interim appointment to a Democratic seat), four can be conceded: Florida, Mississippi, Texas and Virginia. To retain control the Democrats must hang on to 11 more seats, of which three, Tennessee, Rhode Island and West Virginia, are in the category of "safe" for them. In the "doubtful" category are Arizona, Connecticut (two Senate races), Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, New Mexico and Wyoming. In the following gallery of the opponents, the Democratic incumbents are at left.

ARIZONA Here the formidable Democratic incumbent, Senate Majority Leader Ernest McFarland, is "running scared" against popular Barry Goldwater, a relative newcomer to politics who has been stumping in his plane.

CONNECTICUT In a close race, Senator William Benton faces Senator William A. Purtell, a Republican who was appointed to fill seat of late Democratic Senator Brien McMahon and is now trying for a full term.

CONNECTICUT The state's second race is for four years of the term vacated by McMahon, Representative A. D. Ribicoff, Democrat, is a slight favorite to win over Prescott Bush who lost to Benton in the 1950 senatorial election.

KENTUCKY The Democratic Senator, Thomas R. Underwood, has edge over popular John Sherman Cooper, former senator, former football player on Centre College "Praying Colonels," U.N. delegate, early adviser to NATO.

MARYLAND Campaigning for seat of retired Herbert O'Connor, Democrat George P. Mahoney, known as man who cleaned up Maryland horse racing, is building lead over J. Glenn Beall, a congressman for 10 years.

MICHIGAN Senator Blair Moody, Democrat who for more than a year has filled seat of Senator Vandenberg, is running close race with Representative Charles Potter, World War II veteran who lost both legs in combat.

NEW MEXICO Senator Dennis Chavez, whom the Democrats have sent to Washington for 22 years, faces colorful Patrick J. Hurley, ex-Secretary of War and emissary to China who has picked up strength in third Senate bid.

RHODE ISLAND Senator John Pastore, the Democratic incumbent, is the strongest man on his party's state ticket. Against him, Bayard Rustin, 36, a youthful political newcomer, is waging a vigorous but still uphill campaign.

TENNESSEE Albert Gore, the 44-year-old, seven-time representative who won the Democratic nomination last summer from Senator Kenneth McKellar, is confidently facing political unknown named Hobart Atkins.

WEST VIRGINIA Out for a third 6-year Senate term, favored Democrat Harley M. Kilgore, with backing of John Lewis and 120,000 West Virginia miners, is making it tough for ex-Senator W. Chapman Revercomb.

WYOMING This is between state's two most popular politicians, Democratic Senator Joseph O'Mahoney and Republican Governor Frank Barrett whose many campaigns in state may offset O'Mahoney's 19 years' service.

THESE ARE DISPUTED REPUBLICAN SENATE SEATS

The Republicans have 20 Senate seats at stake, and to win control of the upper house they must hang on to every one of them—and pick up two now-Democratic seats besides. Two G.O.P. seats are already certain. In Maine, Frederick Payne has already won an early election, and in California, Senator William Knowland is running on both the tickets. Five more G.O.P. seats are considered just about safe: two in Nebraska, one each in Minnesota, North Dakota and Vermont. In New York and in Wisconsin, Senators Irving Ives and Joseph McCarthy have already built up such powerful backing that only a huge upset would lose these seats for their party. But in the remaining 11 states the Senate races are remarkably close.

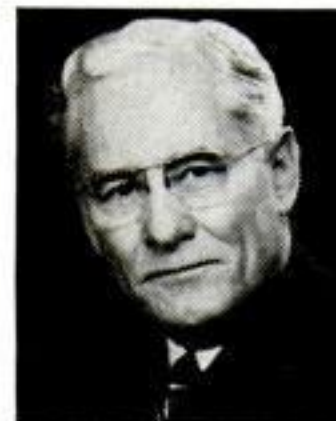

Unlike the membership in the House, which has shown a steady G.O.P. gain, the Republican membership in the Senate has fluctuated. In 1936 the G.O.P. won only 16 of the 96 seats; in 1946 it had achieved a 51-45 majority. But 1946 was the Republican's best recent year, and to win this year they will be forced to do nearly as well again. Should Ike be a heavy winner, they have a chance to make their goal. But if Ike should win by a narrow margin, this presidential election may be the first since 1884 to put one party in power in the White House and another in the Senate.

MASSACHUSETTS Senator Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., who bears a famous Boston name, has an extremely tough contest with Congressman John F. Kennedy, the son of another famous Bostonian, ex-Ambassador Joseph Kennedy.

MINNESOTA Senator Edward Thye, ex-governor of the state, longtime Ike man and favorite of the farmers, is holding a strong lead over William E. Carlson, who is running against him on the Democratic-Farmer Labor ticket.

NEBRASKA Senator Hugh Butler, 74, a strong political power in the state, trying for his third term, is a heavy favorite in the race against Democrat Stanley Long, 65, a druggist who ran for Congress, and was defeated, in 1946.

NEBRASKA In the state's second race, held for seat of the late Senator Wherry, Senator Dwight Griswold, former governor, faces William Ritchie Jr., who was state Democratic chairman and Wherry's college roommate.

NEW YORK Popular G.O.P. Senator Irving Ives leads Brooklyn Borough President John Cashmore, who is little known upstate and will lose votes of the Liberal party, which usually endorses a Democrat, did not this year.

NORTH DAKOTA The unpredictable Senator William Langer, a Republican who often votes Fair Deal, rode with Truman on his last trip through state, is a shoo-in in race against farm machinery dealer Harold A. Morrison.

UTAH Senator Arthur Watkins, who is for a protective tariff and generally against overseas aid, is running for second term against Representative Walter Granger, who declares G.O.P. victory would harm reclamation programs.

VERMONT Senator Ralph Flanders, early Ike backer and hardheaded Yankee liberal, looks like a sure thing in this Yankee state where he is leisurely campaigning against a man little known even in state politics, Allan Johnston.

WRANGLER jeans, jackets, shirts are part of the show at every rodeo! Bill Linderman, World's 1950 All-Around Champ*, and many other big-league cowboys, wear Wranglers. They're real cowboy jeans—snug—comfortable—tough as they come!

WRANGLER WESTERN WEAR is "standard" with Jim Shoulders and Gerald Roberts, World's 1949 and 1948 All-Around Champs. Wranglers are Sanforized to keep that "just-right" fit. Jeans have non-buckling zippers—convenient—no awkward buttons.

WRANGLERS' rugged 11-oz. denim takes the hardest rodeo wear for Todd Whitley, World's 1947 All-Around Champ. No wonder four out of the last five world rodeo champions wear Wranglers! They're your best buy too! Jeans for men, $3.69; youths, $3.49; boys, $2.79. Men's jackets, $3.98; shirts, $3.69. Women's jeans (8 oz.), $2.98; girls', $2.79. Blue Bell, Inc., Greensboro, N. C., World's Largest Producer of Work Clothes. *RCA Ratings

DELAWARE The Republican incumbent, Senator John J. Williams (left), who made name for himself by uncovering Bureau of Internal Revenue scandals, is up against Alexis DuPont Bayard (right), now lieutenant governor.

INDIANA One of the hardest-fought races will be run between the controversial Senator William Jenner (currently running behind Eisenhower in the state), and the well-liked governor of the state, Henry F. Schricker.

MISSOURI After an all-out campaign over more than a year, archconservative Senator James P. Kem is still trailing W. Stuart Symington, popular newcomer to politics who was once Air Force secretary, cleaned up the RFC.

MONTANA G.O.P.'s Senator Zales Ecton, a wealthy rancher endorsed by McCarthy, is banking on Ike victory to help uphill race against Representative Michael J. Mansfield, a Fair Deal Democrat campaigning on Fair Deal record.

NEVADA Senator George Malone is up against Thomas Mechlin, a young reporter who won Democratic nomination against wishes of Democratic boss, Senator McCarran, and hence is getting little help from McCarran organization.

NEW JERSEY Senator H. Alexander Smith, 72, Republican, has experience and help of Governor Driscoll, while Archibald Alexander, 46, once Army undersecretary, counts as advantages youth, Stevenson's friendship.

OHIO The vote-getting record of Senator John Bricker, who was the 1944 G.O.P. vice presidential nominee, gives him an edge over ebullient Michael DiSalle, ex-U.S. price stabilization director and once the mayor of Toledo.

PENNSYLVANIA Senator Edward Martin, with the backing of farmers, businessmen and the Grundy machine, is facing ex-Federal Judge Guy K. Bard who has the backing of labor. Bard needs the help of a Stevenson victory.

WASHINGTON Senator Harry Cain is fighting for his political life against Representative Henry ('Scoop') Jackson whom the Democrats have sent to the House six times and who is concentrating attack on Cain's isolationism.

WISCONSIN Senator Joseph McCarthy, who has made 'McCarthyism' a national campaign issue, is running confidently against ex-State Attorney General Thomas Fairchild, who hopes 'McCarthyism' will get him votes.

LIFE ON THE NEWSFRONTS OF THE WORLD

Polio loses another battle, a priest loses his butterfly collection and Mother Goose loses face

HOUSTON BABY GETS A GAMMA SHOT

Gamma globulin to the rescue

Right behind the hopeful news of polio vaccines (LIFE, Oct. 27) came a report on the gamma globulin injection. Mass tests on 55,000 children (LIFE, Sept. 24, 1951) show that gamma globulin, a disease-fighting blood fraction, gives good temporary protection against paralytic polio. Because of the scarcity of blood supplies, it will probably be used only in epidemic areas. Final victory must wait until permanent vaccines are ready.

Turkey's friendship with the West has led to a new form of Iron Curtain brutality and intimidation. In the past two weeks corpses of Bulgarian Turks have begun to appear on Turkish soil just across from the Bulgarian frontier. So far Bulgaria has deposited 125 bodies as a sign of its displeasure.

The murder proves imperfect

"The Not-Quite-Perfect Crime" (LIFE, Sept. 15) was scrutinized in a Baltimore courtroom last week. Edward Grammer had disposed of his wife and made it look as though she died in a car accident, but police evidence and the testimony of Grammer's mistress, U.N. Employee Mathilda Mizibrocky, convinced the judge that he had killed his wife, presumably so he could marry his mistress. The verdict of first degree murder carries a mandatory sentence of life imprisonment or death by hanging, but Grammer has demanded a new trial.

Last summer Major John Evans amused his children by writing out a check for a million pounds, putting it in a bottle and launching it off the south coast of England. Last week he got a solemn letter from F. W. Van Houten of Holland, who found the check and inquired, "What do I have to do now?"

The nations take up Korea

As the U.N. General Assembly settled down to its first full week of business in its new home (pp. 113-119), the major topic was Korea. Aiming at an international settlement, the Assembly voted over Russian opposition to 1) invite the South Korean government to the talks, 2) not invite the North Koreans and Chinese Communists, 3) consider setting up a commission to study China's germ warfare charges against the U.S. Reviewing the Korean situation for the Assembly, Secretary of State Dean Acheson calmly and methodically placed the blame on Russia, asked for formal approval of U.S. conduct of the war and the truce talks.

Two vetoes for TV

Television likes to think of itself as a popular medium but last week it ran into stern opposition from two critics. In London the coronation commission decided that the crowning of Queen Elizabeth in Westminster Abbey next year could not be carried on live TV because the cameras might catch the queen in an informal moment, patting her hair or mopping her brow. In Long Island, Frank Walsh, annoyed by the noisy show his wife, mother-in-law and children were watching, pulled out his trusty .38 and shot the set dead.

Into Hong Kong last week came a saddened 87-year-old priest, Father Adolph Buch. On leaving China after 46 years as a missionary, he had had to surrender both his hearing aid and his prize collection of butterflies to Red customs officials. It is illegal to take any mechanical device out of the country. As for the butterflies, the Chinese said they were afraid Father Buch might give them to Americans who would infect them with germs and scatter them over China.

U.N. flushes its Reds

When some American employees of the U.N. refused to tell a Senate Internal Security subcommittee whether or not they were engaged in Communist and espionage activities, Secretary General Trygve Lie immediately fired one man, suspended a second and placed 10 others on "special leave." Still another U.N. official, David Zablodowsky, admitted that he had once worked for the Communist underground, thereby confirming the charges made against him by Witness Whittaker Chambers.

The soft coal miners and the soft coal operators had negotiated their way to a new contract allowing for a $1.90 wage boost. But when the contract came up for review, the Wage Stabilization Board said the boost was inflationary and reduced it to $1.50. Promptly 350,000 miners went out on strike. By the end of the week the soft coal operators were in the unique position of begging the government to let them pay the full $1.90.

Villainy in nursery rhymes

In England a Manchester publishing house is worried because few people realize "the extensive villainy" to be found in Mother Goose nursery rhymes. Taking an average 200-rhyme collection as a sample, investigators found two cases of choking to death, one death by devouring, one death by shriveling, one boiling to death, eight allusions to unclassified murder, one body snatching, one desire to have a limb severed, one bleeding heart, one case of cannibalism, one description of marriage as a form of death, one case of scorning the blind and two instances of racial discrimination.

Gambler Frank Costello had already been tucked away in prison (LIFE, Aug. 25), but the Department of Justice decided to go one step further. A petition was filed last week to take away Costello's citizenship on the ground that he had not been of good moral character when he applied for naturalization 27 years ago.

PLANE HAS A HIGHWAY ACCIDENT (LEFT) AND CRASH VICTIM'S SHOES ARE STILL LACED

Two freakish plane accidents took place in the U.S. last week. In Memphis when one motor of a C-46 failed during take-off, the ship ploughed off the runway and smashed a car on the highway (left). In Miami when a Piper Cub crashed, the tremendous impact threw passenger Sam Miller right out of his shoes (right) and killed him.

A gift of Beauty -- a joy forever

This charming decanter is a replica of those that graced the bars of famous taverns, inns, and sideboards of the Old South. In those by-gone days, whiskey was sold in barrels and served from decanters which are now antiques. THE ARCHBISHOP of North and South America speaks during dedication, praising Skouras' help.

A Cathedral from Charlie

A GENEROUS SKOURAS SHOWS HIS DEVOTION

Charles P. Skouras, who came to the U.S. from Greece when he was 19 and made a fortune as a theater owner, is one of this country's most faithful members of the Greek Orthodox Church. Ten years ago Skouras resolved to build a church for the 12,000 Orthodox Greeks in Los Angeles. The resulting edifice was dedicated last month and named the Cathedral of Saint Sophia. Much of the $2 million cost was met by Charlie Skouras himself. The rest was contributed by his two brothers, Spyros, head of 20th Century-Fox, and George, along with Skouras' friends and fellow church members.

Devout and immensely proud of his church, though brisk and breezy in talking about it, Mr. Skouras asks visiting friends, "How do you like the joint?" Most of the friends, who call him Charlie, are overwhelmed. The massively ornate interior (opposite page) boasts tremendous murals, icons lit by neon tubing, air conditioning and a pipe organ from a Los Angeles movie theater. The lighting system can produce 100 different combinations.

"I've blended my theatrical experiences into this thing," said Charlie. "If something don't look good, tear 'em down and fix it good." Striving for perfection, he had the $68,000 worth of chandeliers rehung three times before he was satisfied. At the cathedral's opening last month, Archbishop Michael showed his church's gratitude by bestowing on Charlie the Ecclesiastical Medal, Greek Orthodoxy's highest lay award. It was the first time the medal had ever been given to an American citizen.

THRONE for bishop is tested by Charlie. Chair is made of birch and decorated in gold leaf, cost $1,150. Insignia on back of chair is a symbol of Christ.

PROCESSION led by acolytes marks the beginning of the dedication, winding through the cathedral grounds. Church itself is built of steel and concrete.

CATHEDRAL CONTINUED

WARNING SIGN for choir is held up by choirmaster. Dedication was televised for two and three quarter hours, most of cost being paid by Skourases.

WIRELESS MIKE pinned just below collar transmits chanting by participants in church ritual during services to cathedral's amplifying system.

BAPTISMAL FONT complete with faucets of hot and cold running water is inspected by Charlie and a bronze expert. It has a drain similar to a bathtub.

CARILLON CONSOLE is tried out by Charlie. Church has two sets of bells, one operating from this console and one through the organ keyboard.

THREE BROTHERS, Spyros, 59, Charles, 63, and George, 56, pose by plaque of which Charlie says, "It says who comes through with the do-re-me."

MEDAL is given to Charlie by Archbishop Michael in ceremonies before cathedral doors were officially opened for dedication.

MAUSOLEUM will hold Charlie and his family. "We've all got to die some day," said Charlie. "Now I'm taken care of."

THE BLOSSOM OF THE ANCIENT LOTUS WAS FULLY OPEN BY 9 A.M., CLOSED BY 3 P.M. THE FLOWER BLOOMED FOR FOUR DAYS, THEN ITS PETALS DROPPED

DR. OHGA kept four-day vigil over the flower, recorded hourly changes.

The Oldest Flower

Buried 2,000 years, lotus seed finally gets chance to bloom

Most lotus plants bloom every year, but the lotus above waited 2,000 years to produce its first blossom. Until a year and a half ago its seed had lain in a neolithic canoe which was buried beneath 18 feet of earth in a peat bog not far from Tokyo. While digging for the peat, some Japanese workmen discovered the canoe and turned it over to some archaeologists. The archaeologists in turn discovered the 2,000-year-old seed and turned it over to Japan's lotus expert, Dr. Ichiro Ohga, who placed it in a tank of water to see if it would sprout. This summer, after a year of germination and growth, the seed developed into a beautiful pink flower. Although it is the oldest seed ever to blossom, it did not overwhelm Dr. Ohga, who has had similar success with 1,000-year-old seeds. "It's quite a flower," he said, "but not different from lotuses today."

ANCIENT SEED SPROUTS

ANCIENT HOME of lotus seeds was this fossilized section of a neolithic canoe. Only one of the three seeds found in the fossil has produced a blossom.

TEMPORARY HOME for seeds was glass tube. No germination took place in tubes, which only served as storage place until Dr. Ohga could experiment.

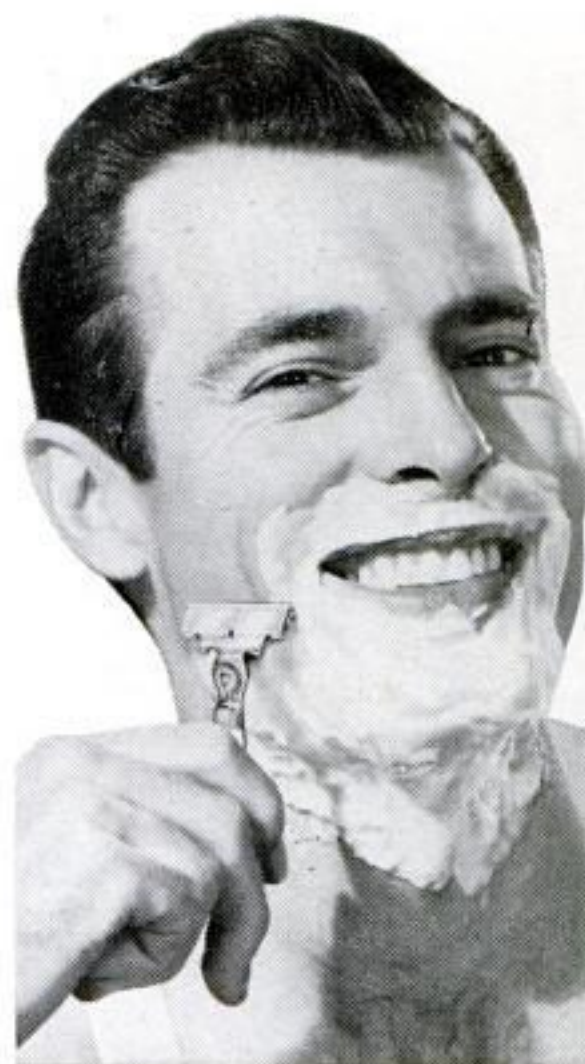

GERMINATION BEGINS when Dr. Ohga cuts seed shell with scissors and places it in water. Old seeds develop hard shells, making growth impossible.

THE SPROUT APPEARS on the fourth day after the shell was cut. Dr. Ohga's prediction that the flower would be pink came true 14 months later.

Back when Wilson was President

In 1914, Cadillac's announcement of America's first V-8 engine shared the news headlines with such stirring events as the start of World War I and the opening of the Panama Canal.

BACK WHEN Wilson was President -- and the 1914 Cadillac was the "Standard of the World," as it is today -- AC was already the established leader of the spark plug industry.

ACs have "sparked" the performance of every new Cadillac model since -- have been standard factory equipment on nearly as many new cars as all other makes of plugs combined.

AC's latest improvement is the patented CORALOX Insulator. It provides better insulator shapes -- better heat conduction -- better electrical insulation -- greater resistance to fouling -- surer firing throughout the entire heat range of the engine.

For smoother, surer, longer-lasting spark plug operation, vitalize your engine with ACs. There's a type for every make of car.

IN HIS LONDON STUDIO EPSTEIN WORKS ON MONUMENTS SYMBOLIZING SOCIAL CONSCIOUSNESS. THEY WILL BE PLACED IN PHILADELPHIA'S FAIRMOUNT PARK

A Spurned Sculptor Triumphs

ATTACKED FOR 50 YEARS, EPSTEIN IS ACCLAIMED IN HUGE EXHIBIT

Five years ago the trustees of the Tate Gallery in London created a furor when they refused to accept a gift of a gigantic statue of Lucifer by Jacob Epstein. This month the Tate trustees, whom Epstein had labeled "a lot of nincompoops," did an about-face. In a huge exhibition covering a half century of his work they paid honor to the 72-year-old sculptor and to his once-spurned Lucifer, which towered over the whole show (p. 66). The triumph was sweet to Epstein. For most of his life he has been the center of artistic controversies, attacked by public and critics alike. His distorted and often misshapen statues, decried as "vile" and "obscene," were censored with fig leaves, splattered with red paint, even sent on tour in a kind of peep show under the billing of "the world's greatest shocker." But in spite of the controversies—or perhaps helped by them—Epstein has gradually gained public approval. His titanic sculptures, most of them as extreme and uncompromising as ever, have made their way into museums, parks and public buildings of Europe and the U.S. Today Epstein is hailed by critics as "England's greatest living sculptor."

Clorets, with active chlorophyll*, banish odors from such causes as: ONIONS, GARLIC, SMOKING, ALCOHOL

CLORETS HAVE ONLY ONE PURPOSE
They make breath "Kissing Sweet" in the quickest, pleasantest way possible. More people buy CLORETS than any other product made for this purpose.

It's simply amazing how fast new CLORETS Candy Mints or CLORETS Chewing Gum banish breath odors even after onions, smoking, alcohol.

True, not synthetic... CLORETS contain active chlorophyll. CLORETS Candy Mints and delicious CLORETS Gum bring you the astounding benefits of chlorophyll, put into a most effective, quick-acting form. You'll love the fresh, minty flavor of CLORETS Mints and Chewing Gum. Keep your breath "Kissing Sweet" with CLORETS.

MAKE THIS "KISS TEST"

Eat onions.
Take CLORETS (Candy Mints or Chewing Gum).
Now exchange a kiss.
You'll find your breath is "Kissing Sweet".

DISPUTED "LUCIFER" looms over Epstein as he talks to a visitor at opening of exhibition. The bronze statue, 11 feet high, took five years to complete.

APPROVING MODEL, Judith Margulies, stares up at portrait which Epstein made of her in 1951. Her father owns three other sculptures by Epstein.

TWO BIBLICAL 'SHOCKERS'

"BIOLOGISTS' NIGHTMARE" was the term used by critics in 1939 in denouncing Adam, a 7-foot statue which the sculptor carved from pink alabaster. They also called it "three tons of ugliness," but Epstein defended the statue as a symbolic portrayal of the "aspirations and development of mankind."

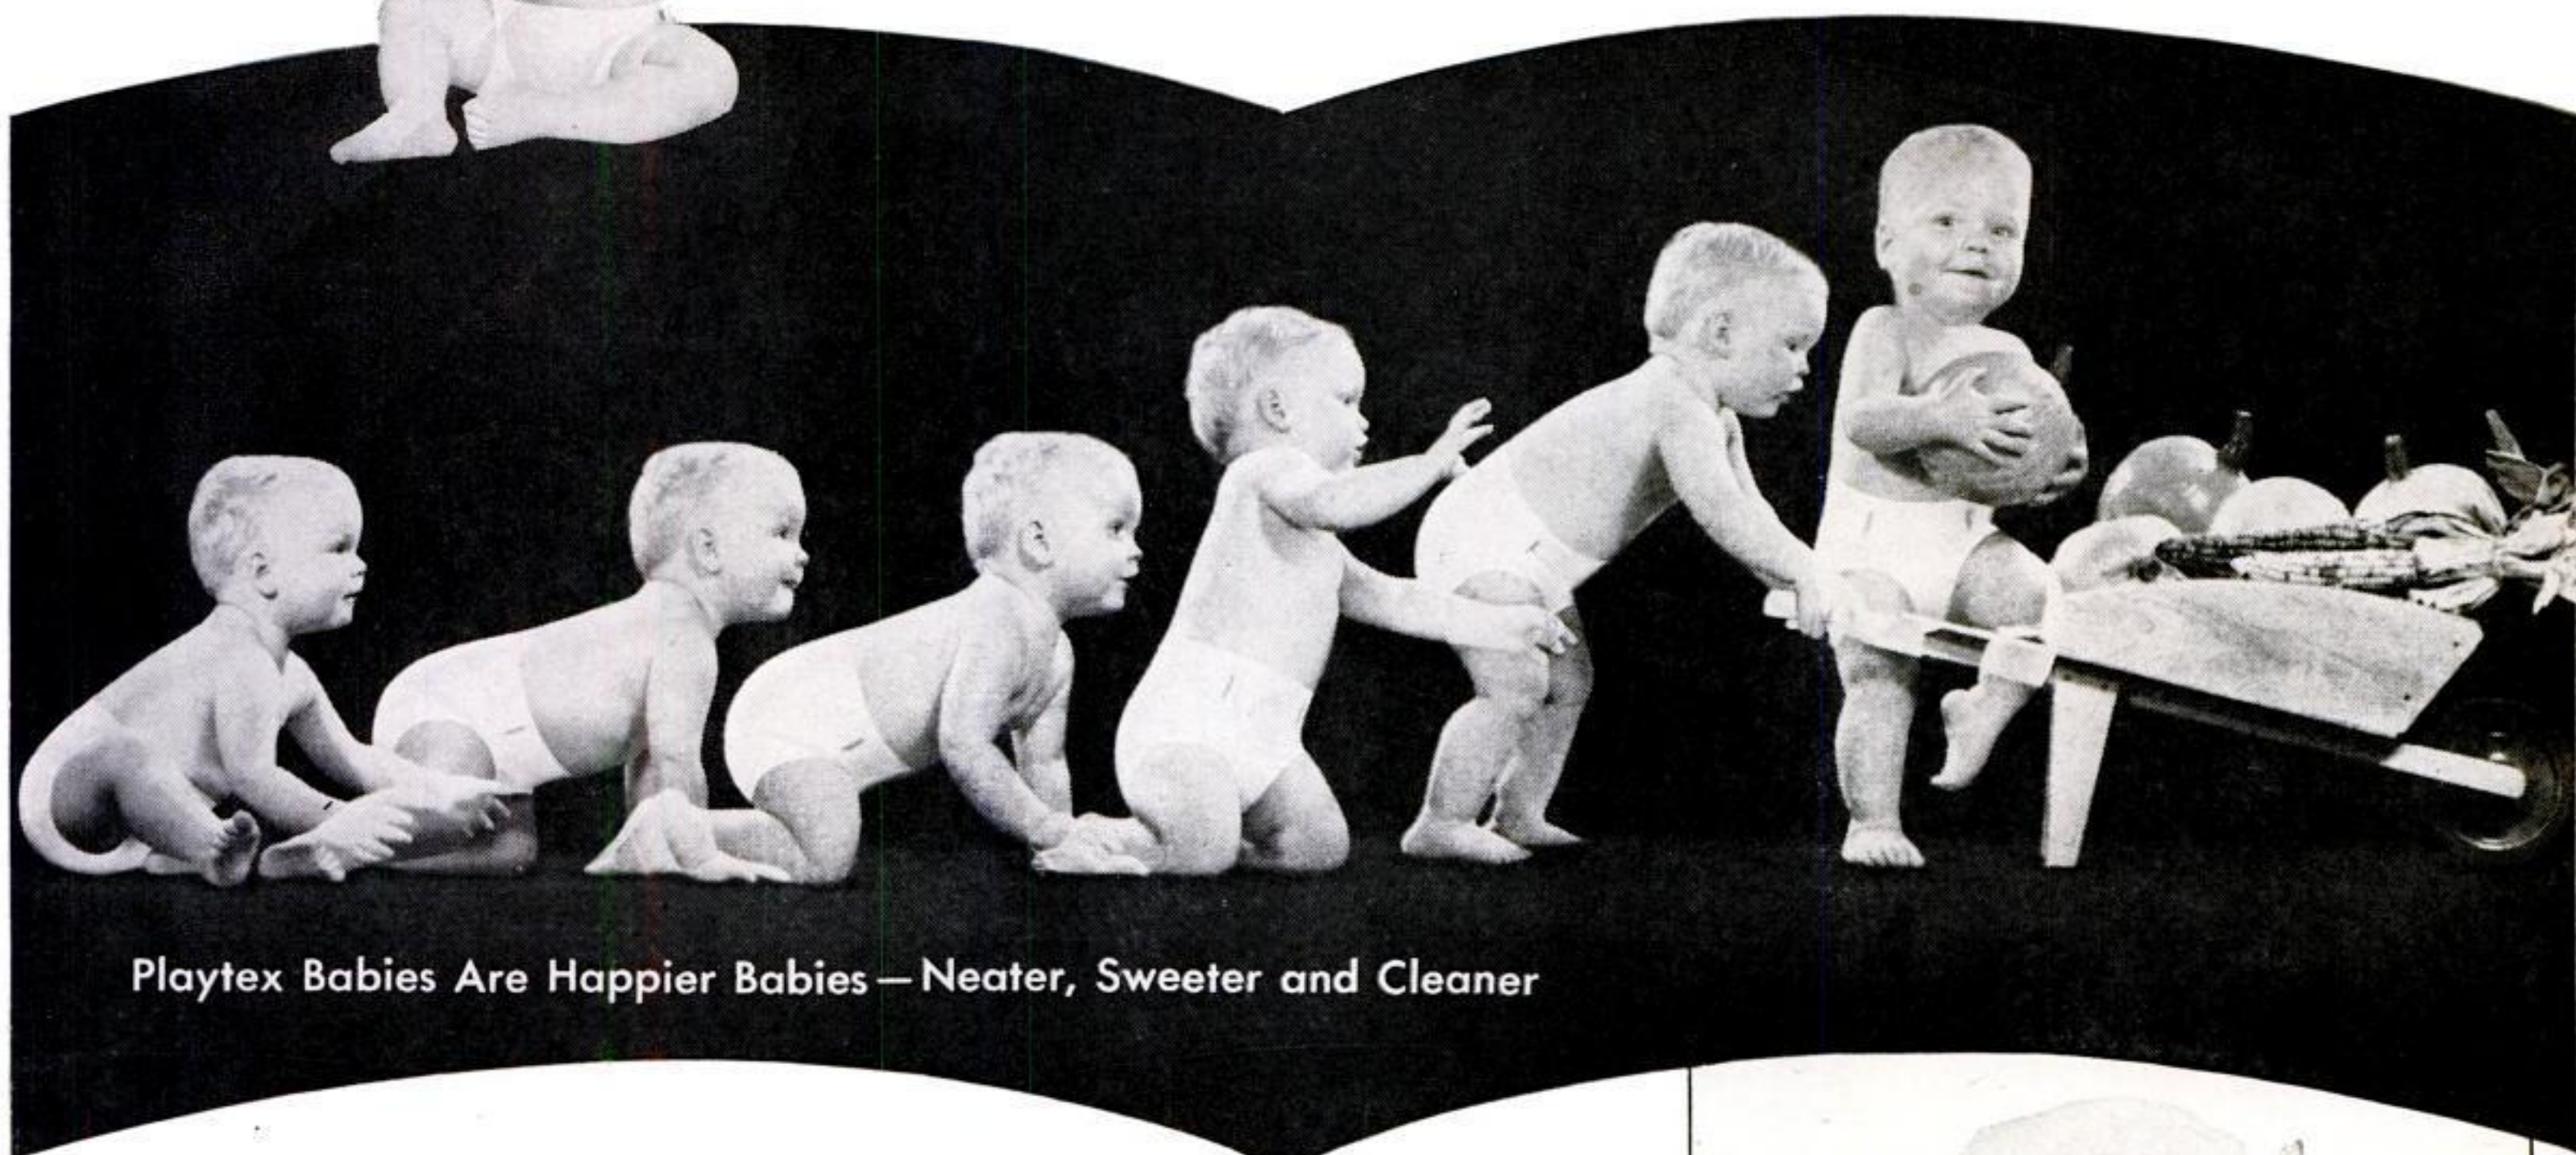

"IT IS FINISHED" is Epstein's name for a prostrate figure of Christ showing wounds in hands and feet. Done in 1937, the two-and-a-half-ton figure was attacked by one critic as "an outrage on Christian ideals," praised by another as "magnificent," described by still another as "a riddle without an answer."

SCULPTOR TRIUMPHS CONTINUED

EPSTEIN AND EINSTEIN met in 1933 when the scientist escaped to England from Nazi Germany. Epstein did bust at Einstein's retreat near Cromer.

A LIFE OF HARD LABOR

Although Britain now claims Jacob Epstein as one of her great sculptors, he was born in New York City. The son of Russian-Polish immigrants, he studied at the Art Students League, earned money on the side selling drawings to a magazine. In 1902 he went to Paris, three years later settled for good in London. In 1907 Epstein provoked the first of a long series of controversies when, commissioned to decorate an office building, he produced some brazenly nude statues. These brought him notoriety and more commissions. Before long Epstein was coupled with two celebrated contemporaries, Gertrude Stein and Albert Einstein, in the now-famous limerick:

I don't like the family Stein;
There is Gert, there is Ep and there's Ein;
Gert's poems are bunk,
Ep's statues are punk,
And nobody understands Ein.

While the public in general agreed with the rhymers, an array of notables took exception and kept Epstein busy doing their portrait busts. His sitters included most of the great figures who have lived in or passed through England: Winston Churchill, George Bernard Shaw, Nehru, Haile Selassie, even his rhyming "relative" (above).

Now at the peak of his fame, Epstein divides his time between vehemently individualistic monuments and vigorously realistic portraits. He seldom goes out but enjoys a steady flow of guests who want to visit with the "master" or study his collection of African sculpture. But most of his day is dedicated to working. "Anyone who decides to be a sculptor," he says, "condemns himself to a life at hard labor."

SCULPTOR'S HOME is four-story house in Kensington area.

EPSTEIN AT TEATIME entertains friends as working day ends. Since his wife died in 1947, he is generally visited by one or more of his five children.

X-Rays show how New Life SAFETY IN ALL BLOWOUTS...

Any tire, new or old, can blow out! And when you have a blowout... only the LifeGuard double air-chamber principle shown in these X-rays can fully protect you against dangerous loss of control!

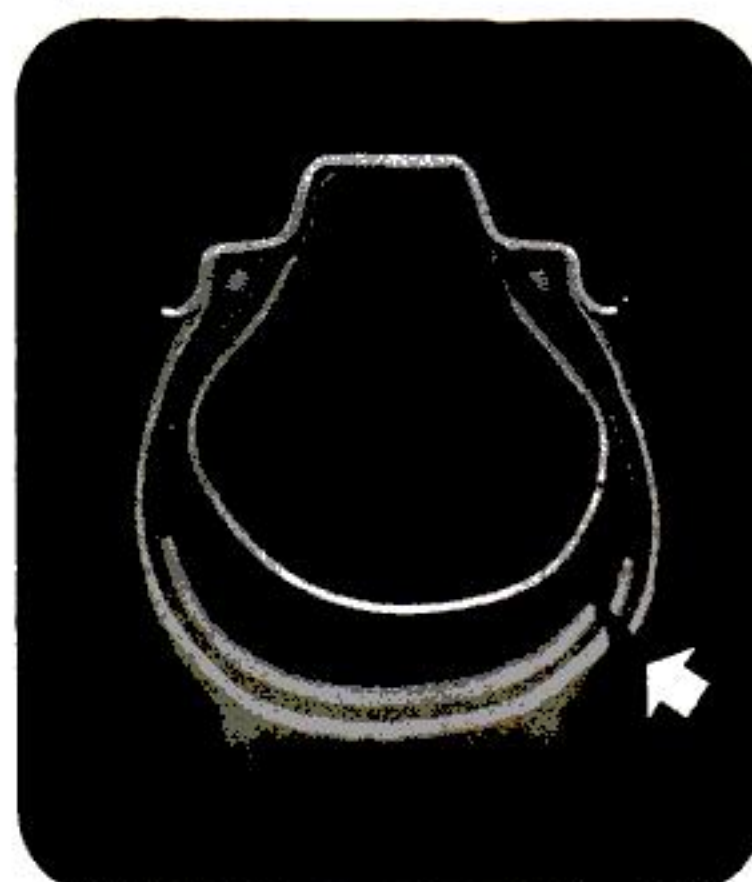

1. Inner chamber of New LifeGuard Safety Tube is made of tough cord fabric to protect you. Watch it in X-ray action!

2. Blowout break is just beginning to appear. In a split second the air will rush out! But only out of the outer chamber.

3. In 17 years, in millions of miles, we know of no case of failure of this LifeGuard principle in a blowout emergency.

4. Break is complete. With so large a blowout, puncture-sealant alone could not prevent a dangerous drop to the rim.

5. See how the inner LifeGuard chamber still holds air — a lifesaving reserve of air to prevent accidents.

6. LifeGuard lets you come to a safe, controlled, straight-line stop. Be sure you're safe with LifeGuards!

THE ONLY 100,000 MILE RE-USABLE

You save 20% to 43% per wheel!

This is the only protection against both blowouts and punctures that doesn't wear out when your tires wear out!

You spread the cost of the New LifeGuard Safety Tubes over 3 or more sets of tires, for 100,000 miles or more of blowout-safe, puncture-safe driving. Thus you save 20% to 43% per wheel.

You can use them in your present tires. If your tires are still good, you can have blowout and puncture protection now—for the price of the tubes alone. Just have your Goodyear dealer equip your tires with a set of New LifeGuard Safety Tubes!

NEW LIFE GUARD SAFETY TUBES

Guard Safety Tubes give you SEAL THEIR OWN PUNCTURES!

Puncture coming up! But don't worry, you won't have the dirty job of changing a tire when you're riding on New LifeGuards. These X-rays show how New LifeGuards mend their own punctures.

1. Notice the layer of soft gum-rubber on the inside of the New LifeGuard Safety Tube? Now watch what happens . . .

2. Nail pierces tire! Notice how sealant surrounds the nail, seals puncture, prevents loss of air pressure.

3. Inner chamber of 2-ply cord fabric floats freely, offers no resistance to puncturing object, is not pierced.

4. Now we pull the nail out. The air pressure inside the tire forces the puncture-sealant against the nail.

5. Now you can see the puncture-sealant already flowing into the hole as the nail comes out. And now . . .

6. With the nail entirely out, you see that the New LifeGuard Safety Tube has completely mended its own puncture.

PROTECTION!

Pay as little as $1.25 a week

Most Goodyear dealers will be glad to arrange a convenient budget plan for you. You can enjoy blowout-safe, puncture-safe motoring for as little as $1.25 a week.

Get Goodyear tires for the longest mileage, the safest mileage, the most comfortable ride on wheels. And equip them with New LifeGuard Safety Tubes for blowout-safe, puncture-safe and carefree motoring.

MONORAIL SWINGS AROUND SHARPLY BANKED TURN AT 90 MPH. TRAIN STRADDLES TRACK. IN OVERHANGING FENDERS ARE GUIDE WHEELS WHICH GRIP RAIL

ONE-RAIL TRAIN

Wenner-Gren's monorail model tests an idea old as railroading

Ever since trains started running on two rails a few imaginative engineers have claimed they would do better on one. These one-track-minded men believed a monorail train would be faster and cheaper to operate. But because twin-rail roads became widely established, only one operating monorail was ever built (p. 78).

Last month a new monorail, built at a cost of $2.4 million, was demonstrated near Cologne,

Germany. Called the "Alweg" after its backer, the Swedish multimillionaire Axel L. Wenner-Gren, it is a passenger-carrying scale model which rides on a single row of wheels. Extra wheels grip the sides of the rail and keep the car from falling off. Because the rail is sharply banked, the train can easily take turns at top speed. The Alweg's designers say full-sized monorails will travel at more than 200 mph.

New way to get fast pain relief!

Bufferin

TRADE-MARK

- acts twice as fast as aspirin!
- doesn't upset the stomach!

1 Here's why Bufferin does everything aspirin does and does it faster and better!

2 Before any product can relieve pain, the pain-relieving ingredients must get out of the stomach and into the bloodstream.

3 Bufferin, being antacid, opens the trap door of the stomach, gets into the bloodstream twice as fast as aspirin.

4 That's why Bufferin relieves your pain twice as fast as aspirin, doesn't upset the stomach!

PRODUCT OF BRISTOL-MYERS

No tablet or powder can give you relief from pain until the pain-relieving ingredient enters the bloodstream. Bufferin, being antacid, opens the stomach valve, gets into the bloodstream twice as fast as aspirin! So, Bufferin acts twice as fast to relieve pain.

And Bufferin won't upset your stomach as aspirin often does, because Bufferin is antacid.

Clinical studies prove that people who took Bufferin had more pain-relieving ingredients actually in the bloodstream in ten minutes than those people who took aspirin had in twenty minutes. That's why Bufferin acts twice as fast as aspirin to relieve pain.

For headaches, neuralgia, and ordinary muscular aches and pains, remember Bufferin for fast pain relief! Ask your physician or dentist about Bufferin. Get Bufferin from your druggist . . . today!

ANCIENT TRAIN, FUTURE MODELS

OLD MONORAIL, probably only other in existence, was built in 1901 to connect two German towns, is still running. Its cars are suspended beneath rail. Originally supposed to do 100 mph, it sways so violently at high speed because of poor aerodynamic design that its top safe speed is only 25 mph.

NEW-TYPE TRAINS, designed for Los Angeles to relieve congested traffic, were exhibited recently by their inventors. The upper two are suspended beneath rails, the bottom one rides between a top and bottom rail. Los Angeles recently appropriated $50,000 for study of feasibility of projects like these.

Amazing Gem Duridium Blade shaves cleaner...with far fewer strokes
...proved easier on the face

This is welcome news to millions of shavers because it means no more tug or skin-scrape. No more after-burn. This remarkable photo (at right) proves that here, at last, is a blade with a keener, longer-lasting edge. The new Gem Duridium super sharp-edged Blade whisks away the toughest whiskers with smoother, sweeter — and far-fewer strokes.

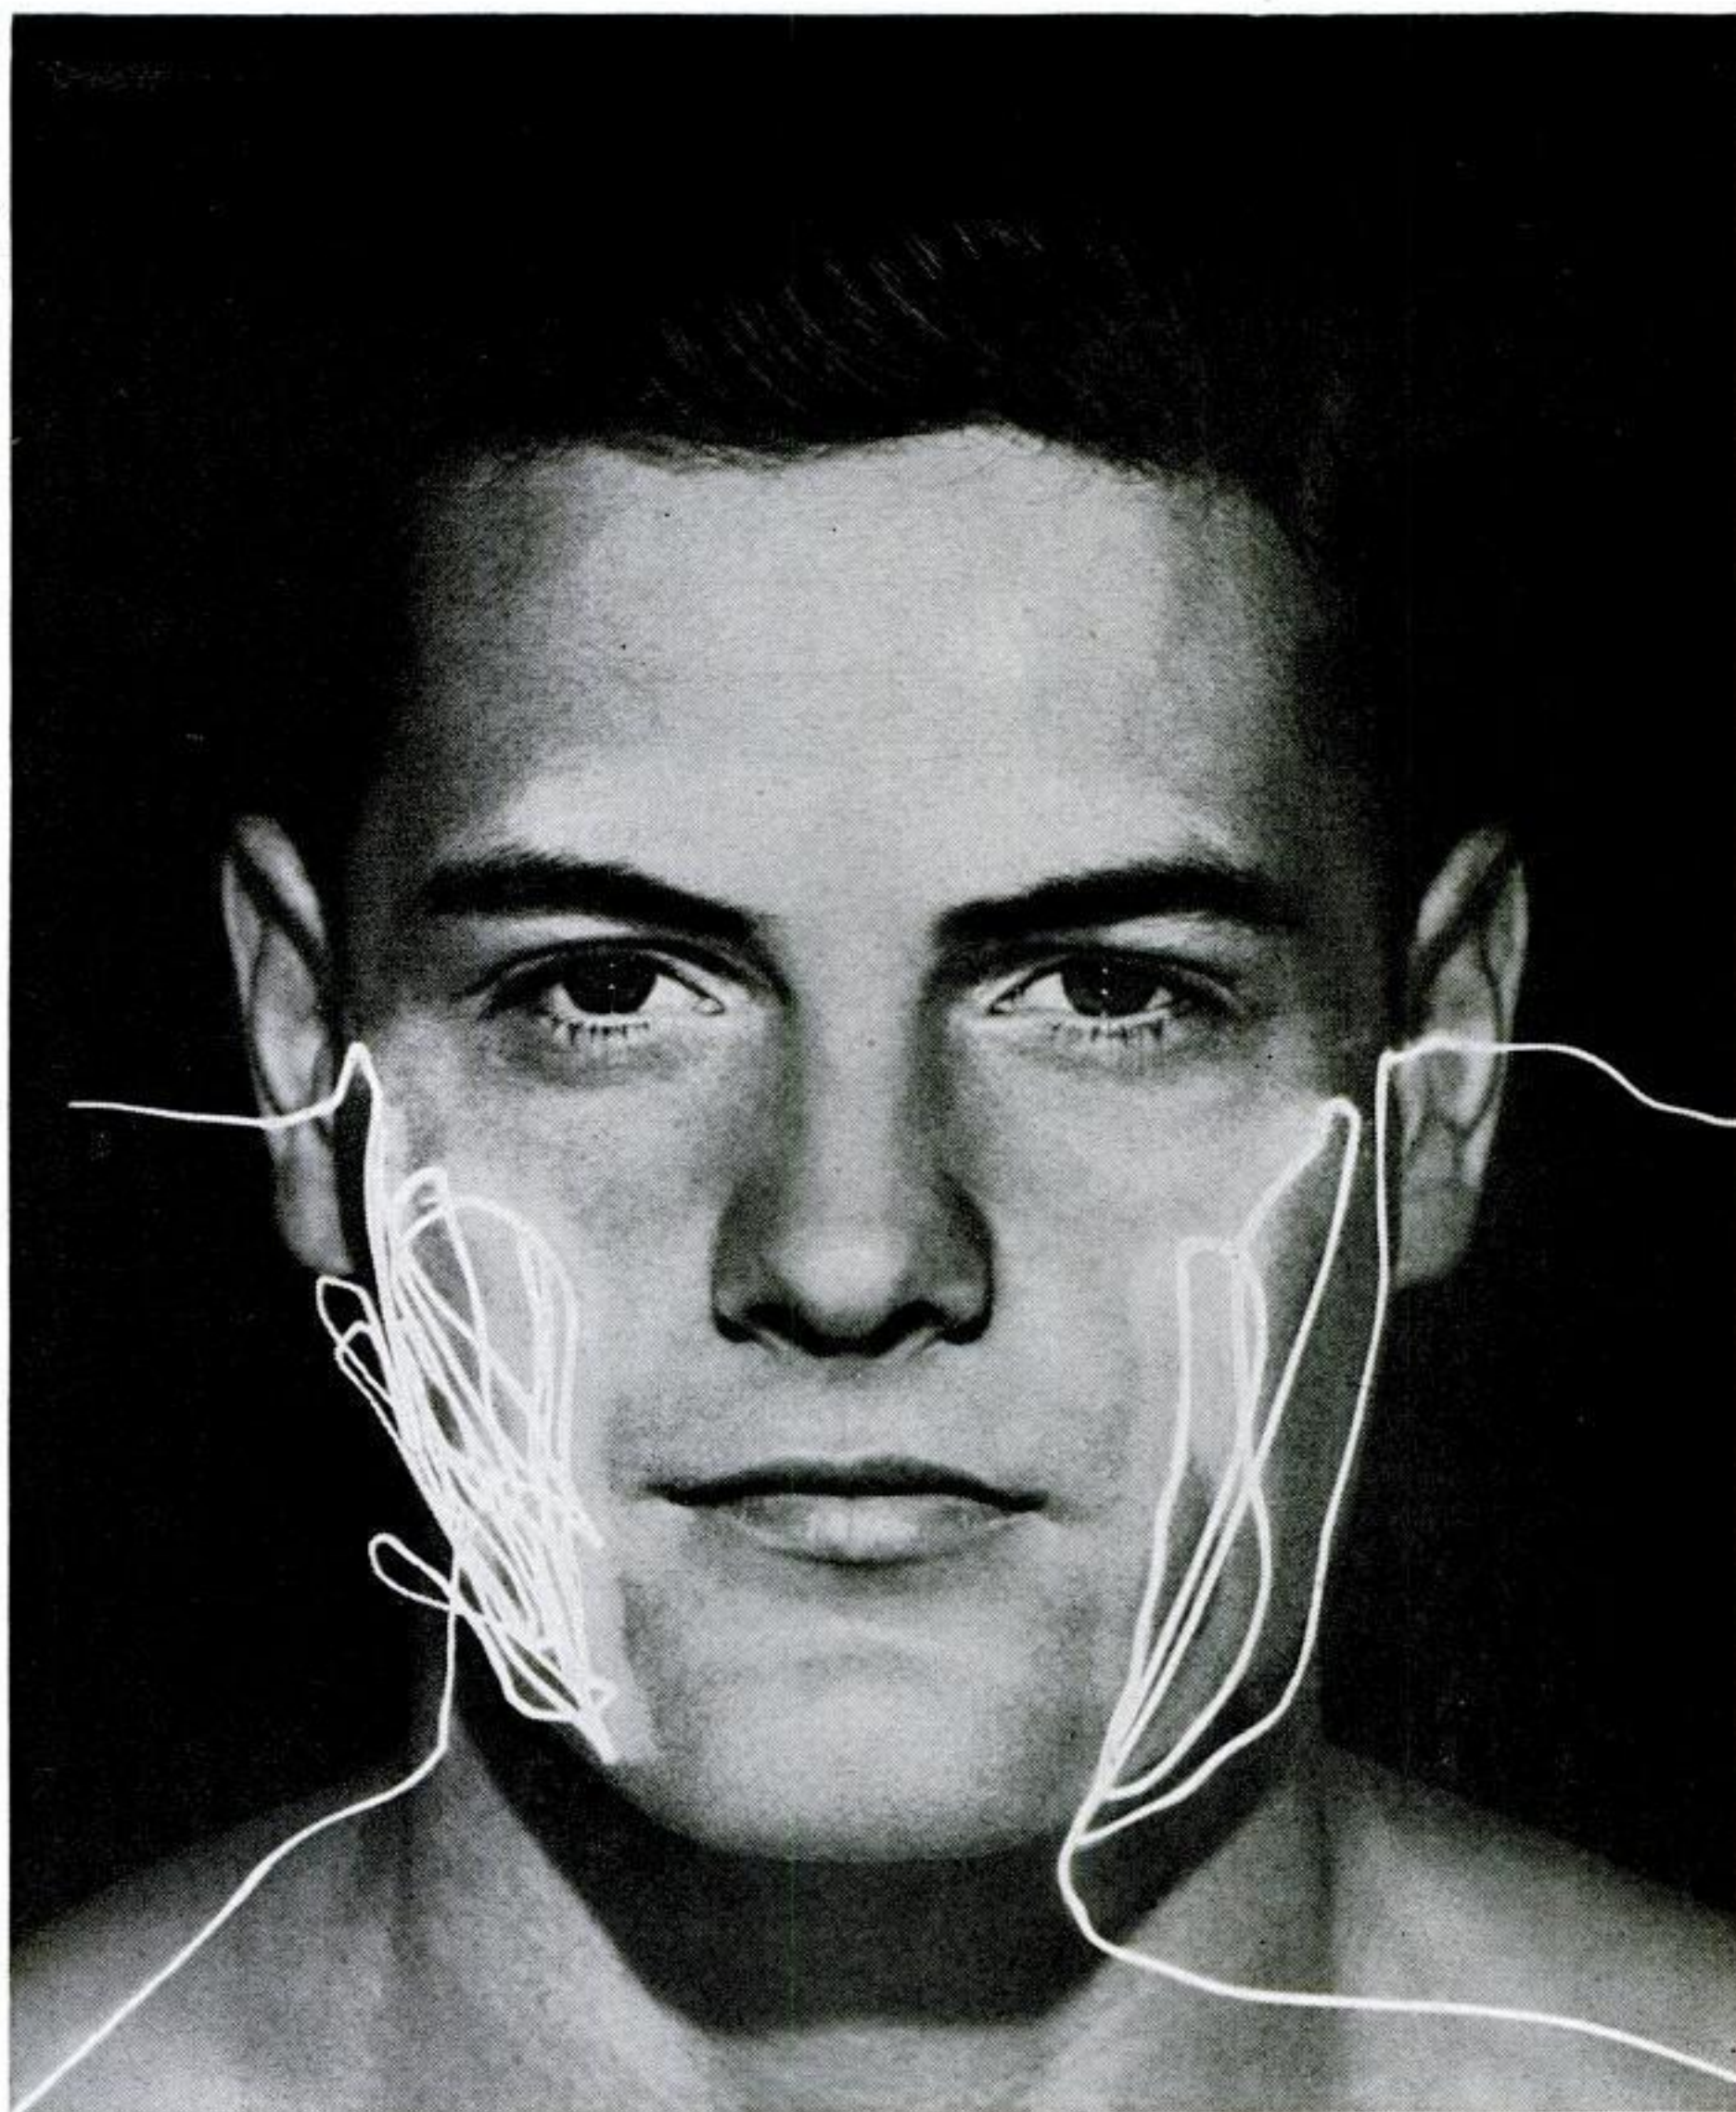

Make this test yourself: shave one side of your face with your regular razor and blade... then shave the other side with the new Gem Razor and a new Gem Duridium Blade. You'll be amazed at the smoother, easier difference. Your money back if the Gem Duridium Blade doesn't give you a smoother shave with fewer strokes!

Mitsuko Kimura was a 19-year-old Japanese girl, pretty and charming but fatherless and poor. Last year she was taken by a photographer to a club where she met LIFE Photographer David Douglas Duncan. Duncan, who was making a photo essay, decided that Mitsuko had the perfect face to sum up the strong and dainty beauty of Japan. He photographed Mitsuko in color and in course of time she appeared on the cover of LIFE's special

Asia Issue in December. An American lady in Oklahoma saw the cover and sent it to her husband, who was in Tokyo making a Japanese movie. He hired Mitsuko. Now Mitsuko has become a star and earns 960,000 yen ($2,400) a year. Still unspoiled and unmarried, she gives all earnings to her mother, who, every night at bedtime, clasps her pious hands and, addressing the honorable LIFE photographer, says, "Thanks, Duncan-San."

Hans Christian Andersen

REAL-LIFE ANDERSEN IN HIS LIBRARY AROUND 1860

THE DANISH STORYTELLER'S LIFE MAKES A COLORFUL MOVIE

The most colorful and the costliest of 1952's movies, Hans Christian Andersen, is based on the life of a gentle, unassuming Dane whose great talent was spinning stories for little children. The peculiar charm of Andersen's fairy tales lies in their combination of the airy and unreal with the earthy and familiar. These pictures, taken by Gjon Mili on the movie set, show how the film tries to re-create that combination.

Producer Samuel Goldwyn, who had long planned to do a film on Andersen's life, was encouraged by the fabulous success of a British movie based on Andersen's The Red Shoes (LIFE, March 8, 1948). Goldwyn spent $4 million on the project, gathering an array of all-star talent—Moss Hart to write the script, Frank Loesser to set famous tales (The Emperor's New Clothes, The Ugly Duckling) to music, Danny Kaye to play Andersen, Renée Jeanmaire to dance in Roland Petit's ballets. And he built huge sets, including the eerie undersea palace of a mermaid princess (next page).

GAY WHIRL of tutus and tights in the Royal Danish Ballet entrances Hans Christian Andersen when he first arrives in Copenhagen from his country town of Odense.

MOVIE ANDERSEN, as played by Danny Kaye, is a cobbler who perches gaily in front of the king's statue in a square in Copenhagen to sing praises of his wares.

Copyrighted material

THE LITTLE MERMAID, one of the most poignant of Andersen's tales, is the subject of a 17-minute ballet which is the film's climax. With the aid of metal harnesses and invisible wire, 16 dancers float, dive and drift around green-lit stage decorated with a mile of fish netting, giant shells, wrecked ships and other flotsam.

A FORLORN LOVER, Andersen comes to realize that the girl he loves (Renée Jeanmaire) is really in love with her husband and ballet master (Farley Granger).

The film's plot is pure fairy tale

The movie's Hans Christian Andersen has little in common with the real one except name, and his story sounds like one of the master's plots. He is a cobbler who becomes infatuated with a prima ballerina. Out of his hopeless love he writes the story of The Little Mermaid, who falls in love with a human, follows him to dry land and kills herself when he chooses another woman. The movie's despairing lover, less dramatically, goes back to storytelling. The real Andersen was somewhat eccentric, but many Danes thought it sacrilegious to put the still more eccentric Danny Kaye in the part. However, his performance is engagingly restrained.

HAPPY MERMAID runs to palace of her beloved prince, where she will find disappointment and death.

HAPPY HANS, reconciled to loss of his love, gaily spins out tales to youthful and grownup admirers. →

Dramatic True Stories Explain Why Ronson is America's Favorite Lighter to Give and to Get!

908 LIGHTS IN A ROW WITHOUT A SINGLE MISS!

At a San Francisco Air Base, airmen competed to see whose lighter lit most often without a miss. Milligan owned a Ronson, the inimitable lighter made with jewelers' precision.

10, 20, 30 . . . went the count. Then one by one, the other pilots missed, and dimly dropped out of the contest. But on and on went Milligan! Press . . . it's lit, release . . . it's out!

700, 800 lights. And then at last, at 908, a weary Milligan stopped! 908 lights without a miss. That's a record! That's a Ronson!

QUANDARY IN THE LAUNDRY

In Princeton, N. J., Mrs. R. A. Vendett washed her son's trousers in the machine, later found his Ronson (a birthday gift) in the pocket. Was it ruined? Mrs. Vendett refueled it. Then she pressed it. After whirling in the washing machine for 15 minutes, that Ronson lit at the very first try!

INSIDE STORY

You don't buy a lighter to abuse it. But these true stories show how Ronsons have survived gruelling tests . . . prove they're built with endurance for years of dependable service. Other lighters may look like Ronsons, but only Ronsons perform like Ronsons! That's why a Ronson costs less in the long run.

INTERNATIONAL RACE

English horse wins dream contest on U.S. track

International "dream races" which bring together the world's fastest horses have been held frequently but seldom satisfactorily. The long ocean trip and the change of climate always unsettled the invaders, giving the home horses an enormous advantage. Last week modern air transport helped bring off a successful international race. Two of England's top horses and a noted German Thoroughbred made a quick, easy trip to the U.S. by plane. Their destination was Laurel, Md., where they were to meet one Canadian and three American horses for a $50,000 purse. As an incentive to Europeans there was a European-style walk-up start instead of a U.S. starting gate and the race was run over grass (below) instead of dirt. With these concessions an English horse, 4-year-old Wilwyn, and his cocky 24-year-old jockey (p. 94) ran away from the North Americans.

International Race CONTINUED

SIZING UP RIVAL before race, one of England's most successful young jockeys, Manny Mercer (left), eyes Eddie Arcaro, America's ace. Their conversation was brief. Said Mercer, "I never wear a skullcap during a race... it gives me a headache." Replied Arcaro, "It's better than a hole in the head."

FIGHTING FOR LEAD which changed six times in thrilling race, Arcaro keeps Greek Ship (2), hot favorite and chief U.S. hope, under control the first time around. The big German horse Niederlander (6) is threatening on outside. At left on rail Mercer on Wilwyn (1) is biding time and saving ground.

CROSSING THE FINISH after spectacular stretch run Wilwyn wins easily. Greek Ship finished far back, but another U.S. horse, Ruhe, beat out England's other entry, Zucchero, for second place. Niederlander was fourth. Wilwyn's owner collected winner's $32,500, refused offer of $100,000 for horse.

Now you can buy all kinds of woolens—woven as well as knit—that wash without losing their fit, without getting matted and hard!

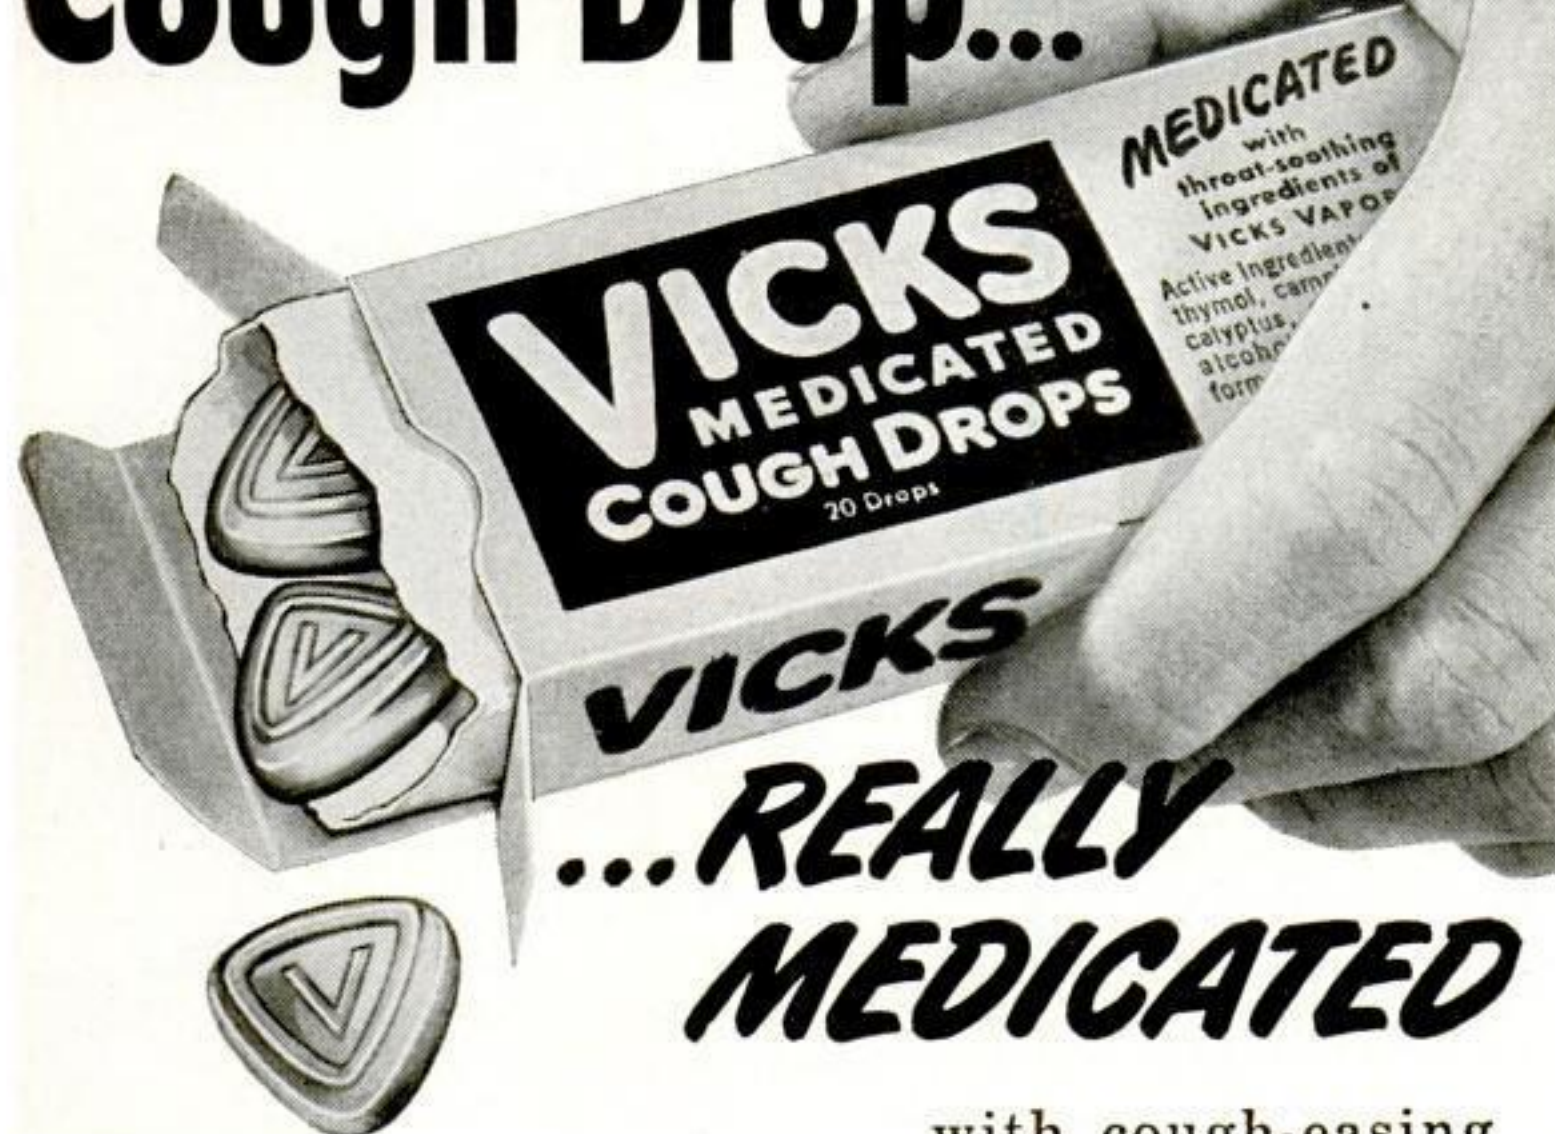

Just think how wonderful to keep the wools that touch your skin soap-and-water fresh! And, of course, only washing can get a youngster's clothes clean!

So look for the magic word "Sanforlan" on all wool garments—yard goods, too! "Sanforlan" trade-marked woolens stay wearable longer—cut cleaning bills.

"SANFORLAN" brought to you by the "Sanforized" people ... Cluett, Peabody & Co., Inc. permits use of its trade-mark "Sanforlan" only on woolen articles which have been treated by procedures approved by this company and which meet its rigid requirements. When washed in accordance with recommended procedures for wool, garments bearing the trade-mark "Sanforlan" will not mat, felt, or shrink out of fit.

BREATHLESS JOCKEY AND HIS SERENE MOUNT ENTER WINNER'S CIRCLE

MERCER HAS A GREAT FUTURE

Little Manny Mercer showed up for the race with a big chip on his shoulder. He and the other English jockey, Charlie Smirke, expected to be boxed in, shut off and generally bounced around by their American rivals. But it was Smirke who inadvertently bumped Arcaro in the race's only collision. "Sorry," Smirke called above the pounding of hoofs, to the astonishment of Arcaro, who is unaccustomed to such apologies. Mercer, who is considered among the logical successors to England's greatest jockey, Gordon Richards, is famous for his confidence and his shrewd judgment of pace. He displayed both at Laurel. "It was a lovely race," he said approvingly after he had won.

AT CHAMPAGNE PARTY Mercer fingers gift, a silver cigaret case, as he tells President John Shapiro of Laurel (right) he knew that he would win.

TUNNELING IN GLASS, a common corkscrew fastened to machine acts as a cutting tool, makes neat twisting tunnel in the cube. Metal block supporting glass

ULTRASONIC CARVING MACHINE

The 'Cavitron' uses high frequency vibrations to chisel out odd-shaped holes in hard-to-work materials

A grave threat to increased U.S. arms production, the severe shortage of the abrasive diamond dust needed to carve hard materials, may be removed by an ingenious new application of ultrasonic waves. The Cavitron Equipment Corporation in Long Island City, N.Y. has developed a machine which uses ultrasonic vibrations and cheap abrasives to push soft steel tools through the hardest substances. The powerful high frequency waves make the tip of the steel cutting tool vibrate 27,000 times a second, turning it into a miniature trip hammer that pounds the abrasive against the material and chips off microscopic flakes. The cutting tool can be blunt, flat, threaded or irregular in shape and thus the machine can cut holes which are impossible to make with conventional equipment (above).

Because it cuts more quickly and cheaply than conventional machine tools, the Cavitron is already being tried by companies that make aircraft parts, radio parts and delicately carved jewels. But its greatest effect on American industry may in time stem from the jobs which it alone can successfully do: carving intricate shapes in hitherto uncarvable materials.

"Accent" Chest in cinnamon and graphite. Flips its front to become a living room desk. Conveniently compartmented, with big sliding tray. Write this opposite someone's name on your gift list! About $135.

"Accent" Night Table or Phone Stand, with attached bench upholstered in pomegranate red. You'll think of lots of uses for this ... and lots of people who would love it for Christmas. About $60.

"Accent" Triple Dresser ... whose center drawer reveals a dressing table with hinged mirror and sliding jewelry trays. Use this piece to spectacular advantage in your living room, too. Nine drawers will provide a world of storage space. And the console top, for bar or buffet service, will save many a step for the hostess. About $160.

Double Bed ... both headboard and footboard a succession of wooden reeds. Slender and graceful ... to give your Mengel bedroom a feeling of light and space and air. About $50.

"Accent" Bench, with pomegranate red upholstery. Give someone a pair for in front of the TV set, or to sit comfortably by the Christmas fire. About $27.50 each.

MENGEL

"First Edition" in cinnamon and white gives this room a double life . . . sitting room by day, bedroom by night. Day Bed with drop-leaf arm, Triple Dresser with vanity-drawer, Chest-Desk, upholstered Bench, and double-duty Night Table. Group, as shown, about $430.

"Accent" Double Dresser . . . a double joy in the dining room . . . to house your linens in the smoothest fashion, and to serve as an efficient server. About $120.

A chest that's a desk, a dresser that's a vanity, a nightstand that holds the phone and the phoner . . . these are a few of the surprises in this collection of Mengel Furniture by the famous design organization, Raymond Loewy Associates.

Note, too, the unexpected use of color and texture and more color. See the amazing drawer-space, and the sleek horizontal lines that make a room look surprisingly large. The prices are surprisingly small.

Choose from two groupings . . . one group called "Accent" with slender wrought-iron legs, the other called "First Edition" for you who like all-wood. Which of your rooms will be first to welcome this new Mengel Furniture?

Performance by Valentina

DESIGNER AD LIBS THROUGH NEW COLLECTION

One of the bonuses of being a regular customer of Valentina, the New York couturier, is an invitation to attend her exclusive showings. Not only are the clothes distinguished but the showing itself is one of the best solo performances in New York. Valentina models her own creations, turning, for the occasion, into a free-wheeling, ad-libbing actress and giving a sharp spoof of a fashion show. Hustling through 34 outfits in just over an hour, she proves that her clothes are easy to put on and, by exuberant antics like mounting a chair (below), that they are wearable as well as handsome. In her deep Russian accent, she offers zany hints on what to do with a handkerchief, how to dress to ask forgiveness of a lover and makes remarks which shrewdly describe, even though they sometimes seem to deprecate, her designs.

This performance comes naturally to the volatile Valentina who has costumed dozens of plays and operas. Her designs change little from year to year. She is a firmly severe critic both of her own creations and her customers' tastes. Even after an order has been accepted, a client who arrives to be fitted in a red dress may find that Valentina has decided it should be blue. A "Take it or take it," is Valentina's ultimatum, which the baffled buyer inevitably does.

"It is if you want to climb," she explains, hiking up her foot to show comfort of jersey traveling dress.

"All those damn glamour girl," she complains, get a photogenic break in striped hat and untrimmed coat.

"One of those horrors that nothing happen to" is her description of the lining of Lyons velvet coat.

"It hangs in your closet for years" is her guarantee of durability of silk chiffon white evening dress.

"Lots of silly nonsense with the handkerchief" goes with the gay outfit she calls "Cocktails Chez Vous."

SHE IS HER BEST MODEL

"Why cover up your diamond with furs?" is a sensible question. She lines them up on hip of cocktail dress.

Valentina has worn her own designs since she landed as a Russian refugee some 25 years ago. Unable to buy clothes, she made her own, soon had friends asking for copies. Beginning by selling clothes off her back, she still designs with herself in mind, sometimes refuses to sell anything she feels is suited only to Valentina.

"I thought I was taller" explains why this flap-pocketed coat looks too long on her when worn without its belt.

"When you have to face somebody and you agree you are wrong" describes beige damask at-home dress.

"I feel like prima donna, absolutely" is her parting comment on this dramatic evening dress. It also has a covering jacket for those times when the wearer does not wish to dance; if she changes her mind, jacket can be tossed aside.

IS YOUR WIFE A DEMANDING WOMAN?

Some thoughts on this subject from a company that has made a career out of pleasing her

Ever notice the change that comes over your gentle wife the minute she sets foot inside a grocery store?

She pinches the grapefruit. She squeezes the bread. She looks for "specials" with an eagle eye.

For when it comes to spending your hard-earned money, your wife is a far tougher customer than you are. This, believe it or not, is an expression of love.

Your wife, you see, lives to please her family and you. We at Procter & Gamble make our living by pleasing her.

In our business of pleasing women, we have laboratories at P&G where we take in bundles of family wash—8,000 a year. Then we wash them in the kind of washing machines you find in homes, and measure how clean they get under an electric eye.

That's one way we test new formulas, so we can keep right on improving washday favorites like Duz and Oxydol, year after year.

Now, women don't ask us to make these improvements. They seem plenty satisfied with our products as they are.

But to keep your wife as a customer, we must keep right on pleasing her by constantly making progress. If we ever stood still, competition would wean her away. And that would serve us right.

Your wife—she's made us what we are today, and we aim to keep her satisfied.

We never will be.

SHE PEELS TO DRESS UP

Valentina gears her clothes to customers who travel freely and also provides for wearers who change their minds. The layers of this outfit can be shifted to change street garb into theater dress. She believes that women who love clothes too much look terrible and only those who treat them with scorn can be really well dressed.

"Istanbul, lovely place, aaaaah . . ." she pauses while displaying versatile outfit named for her onetime home.

"You do that . . ." Valentina wriggles out of coat and discards it on floor, showing red overskirt slit in front.

"And that . . ." she unhitches overskirt from belt and reveals slim black dress which is made of pure silk crepe.

"Then . . ." she pulls scarf from her neck, uncovering strands of pearls, and ties it on head in snood fashion.

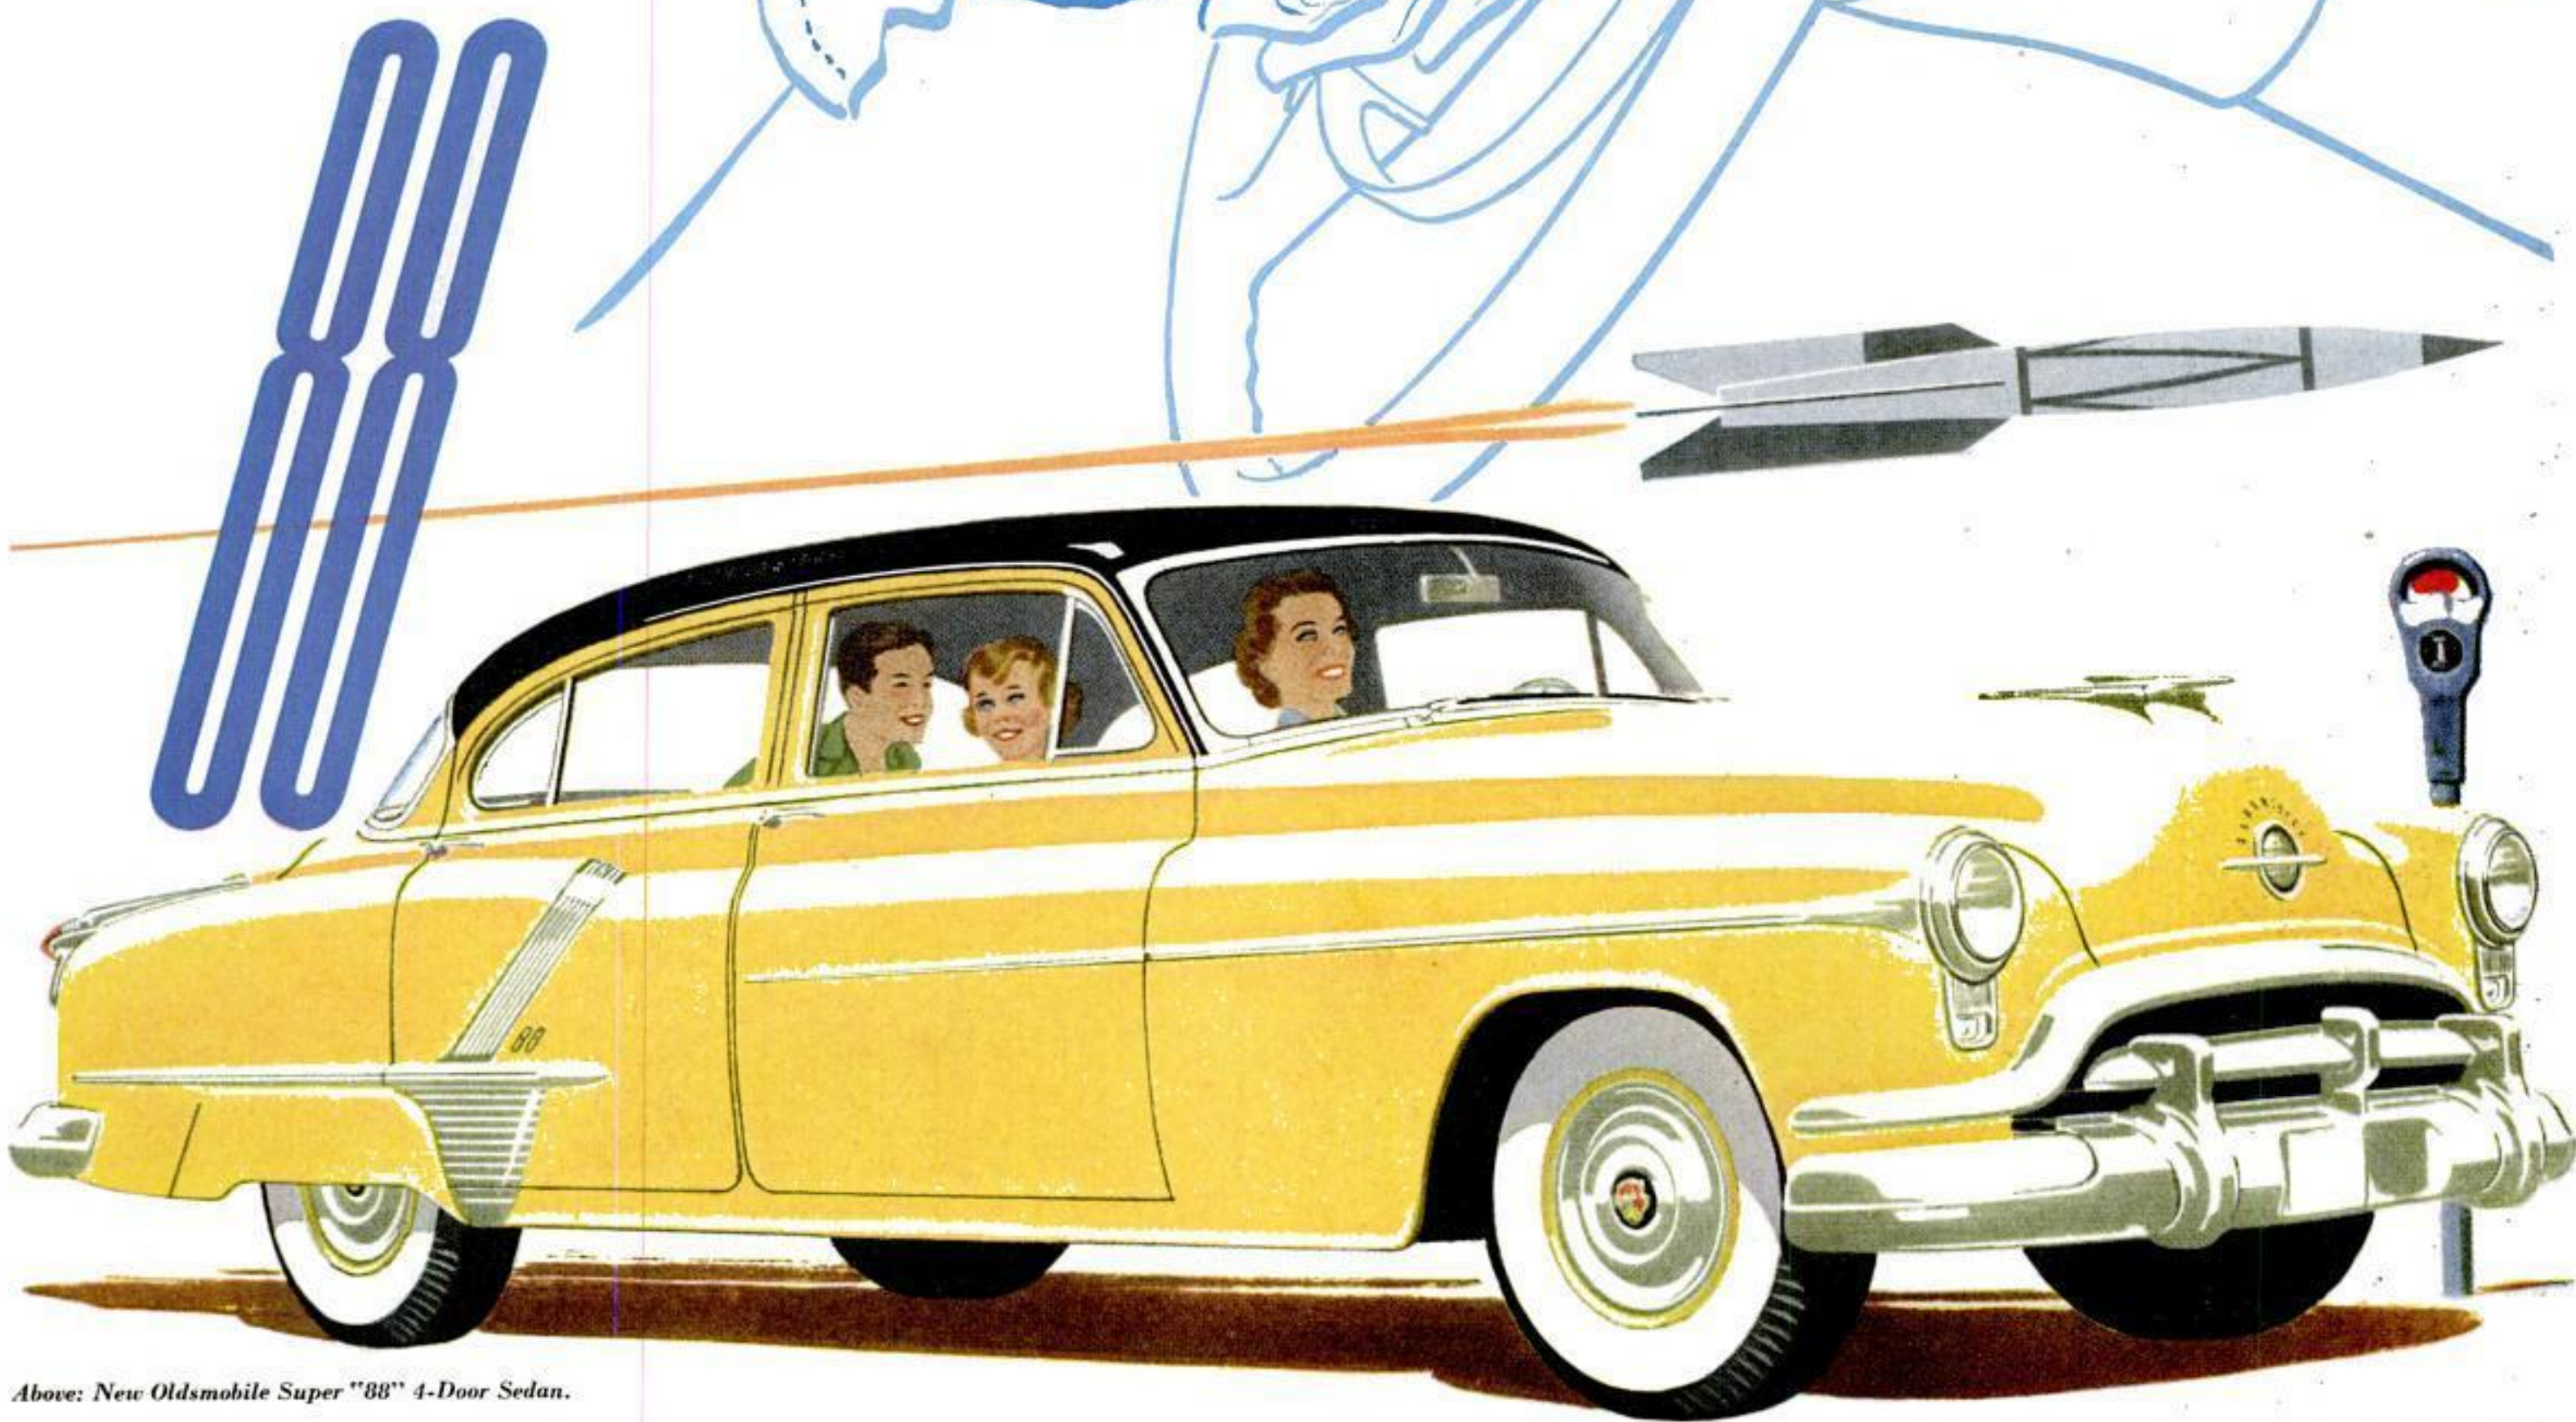

"I hate clothes . . ." she bursts forth, exiting in transformed dress which began as a daytime outfit.

10-Minute Wonder Fudge

Melt together 1 package (6-oz.) Hershey's Semi-Sweet Chocolate Dainties, 4 level tablespoons Durkee's Margarine (half of  $\frac{1}{4}$  lb. stick), in double boiler.

Add . . . 3 tablespoons warm water, 1 teaspoon vanilla, to above.

Sift . . . 3 level cups confectioners' sugar, dash of salt, into large mixing bowl.

Mix . . . 1 cup Durkee's Stayfresh Coconut, or 1-5 oz. can Durkee's Dixie Cut Coconut, with sugar.

Stir . . . melted mixture into bowl of dry ingredients.

Press . . . into 8" pan.

If desired, top with coconut. Chill in refrigerator until set. Remove from refrigerator, cut into squares and serve. (Makes about 1 $\frac{1}{2}$  lbs.)

Creamiest fudge you ever made—faster and easier than you ever made it—and you get perfect results every time!

IN VISITORS' GALLERY, ARCHITECT HARRISON SURVEYS 75-FOOT-DEEP GENERAL ASSEMBLY LOBBY WHICH IS LIGHTED THROUGH TALL BANDS OF MARBLELIKE GLASS (SEE COVER)

AMERICAN ARCHITECT COMPLETES THE $67.5 MILLION U.N. CAPITOL

PHOTOGRAPHED FOR LIFE BY PHILIPPE HALSMAN AND LISA LARSEN

No architect ever has aspired to house the whole world, but the man above, reflectively contemplating his finished work, has built a kind of modern Noah's ark for all species of men from all parts of the earth. He is the U.N.'s boss builder, Wallace K. Harrison, who, with the completion last month of the General Assembly building, has finished the U.N.'s world capitol in New York City.

Harrison began his building in 1947 when the U.N.'s Secretary General Trygve Lie named him, as one of the foremost American architects, to be the chief of planning over a 10-nation board of distinguished architects. After being soothed through many early conflicts (France's great Le Corbusier, for instance, had to be talked out of putting the Secretariat up on stilts) the board went home and left the job largely to Harrison.

The first U.N. building was the Secretariat (completed in 1950), a skyscraper office for the U.N.'s 3,500 permanent staffers. The second was the boxlike Conference building (finished in February 1952) tailored for deliberations of the Security, Trusteeship and Economic and Social Councils. (The interior views here are of Conference and General Assembly.)

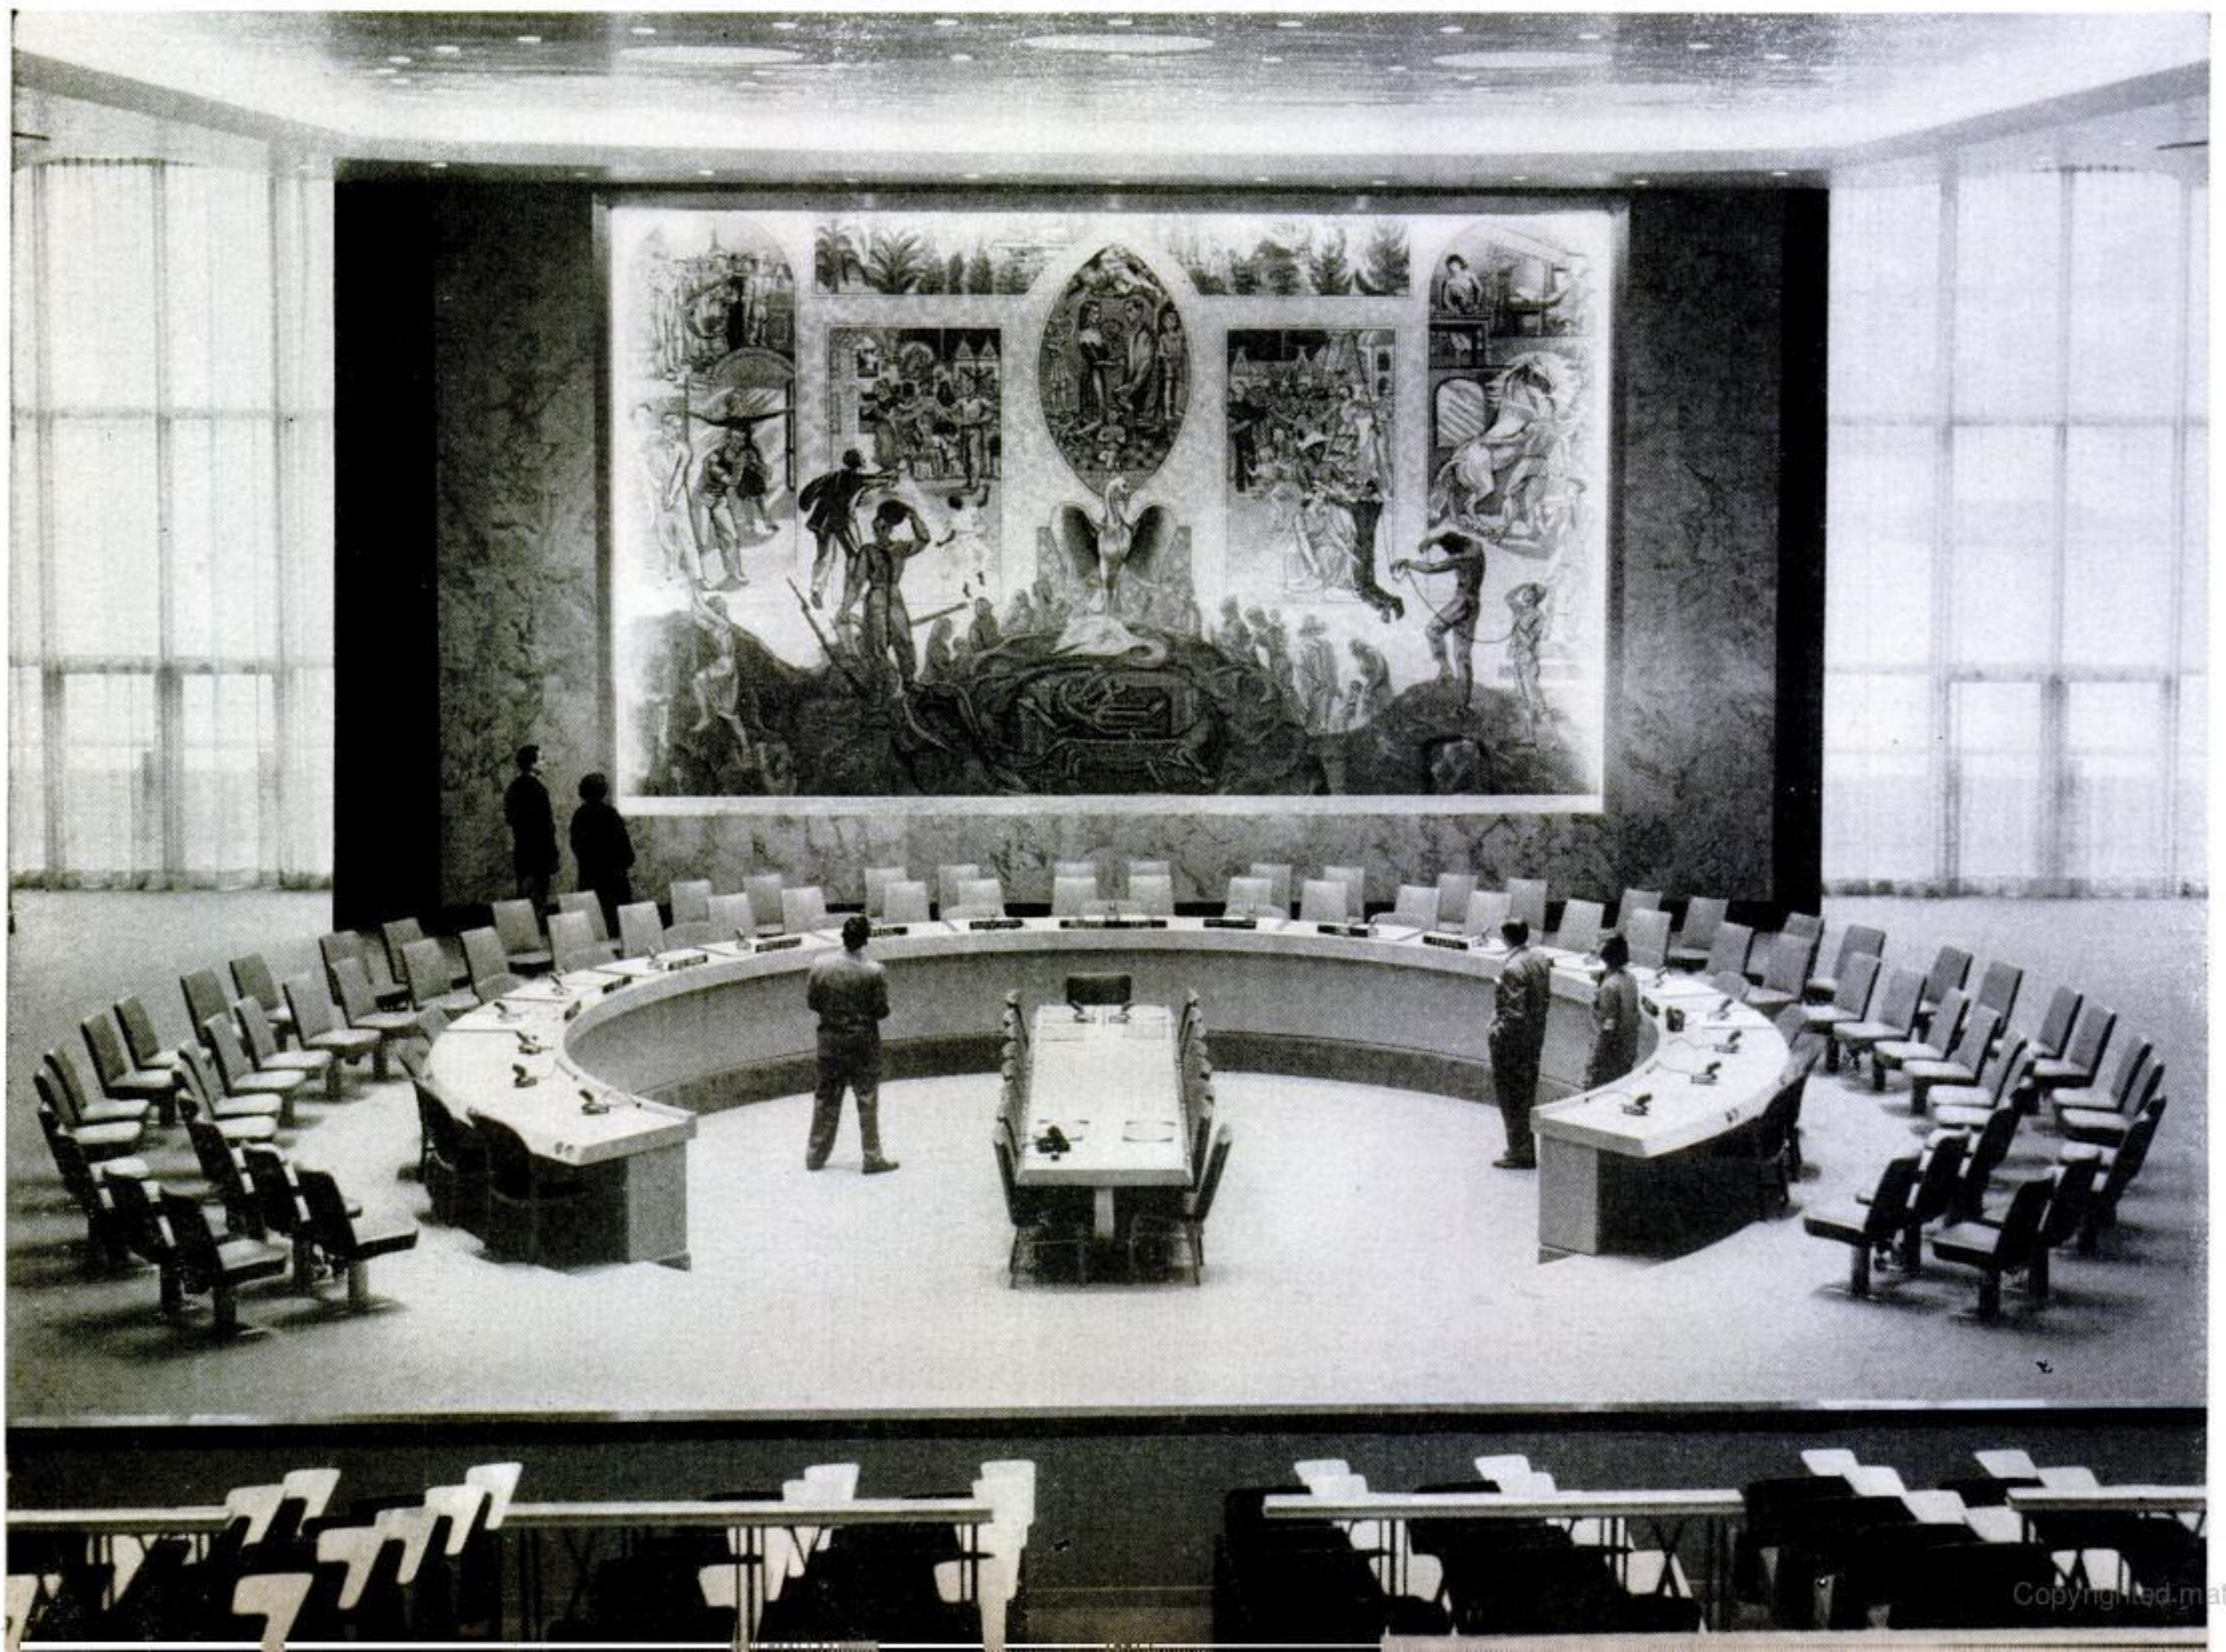

The total result, after a five-year battle of blueprints between rising costs and a dwindling budget (final figure: $67.5 million), has altered the skyline of Manhattan with silhouettes so revolutionary as to start a resounding controversy (Frank Lloyd Wright calls the buildings "a perfect symbol of division"). Other authorities believe Harrison had achieved his aim: "We were not trying to make a monument," explains Harrison. "We were building a workshop . . . the best damn workshop we could."

U.N. CITY looms in dusk along East River. Slablike 39-story Secretariat towers over Conference building (low building, left). General Assembly's clifflike front of marble and glass, pinch-waisted walls and steel dome stand in foreground. Ribbon of light (at right) is First Avenue and stacks (background) are power plant.

SECURITY COUNCIL has spacious meeting room (below) whose windows overlook East River. Decorated by Norway, the room has blue cloth walls woven with gold crowns. Mural by Norwegian artist, Per Krohg, shows mankind, through efforts of U.N., rising to peace and freedom from dark "world we are forsaking."

DELEGATES' ESCALATOR in the General Assembly building is sealed within a glass enclosure. This group of schoolchildren was permitted to ride on it to pay a call on Mrs. Roosevelt. The decorative plants in the foreground are silhouetted against the building's clear-glass south wall and trees in the U.N. plaza.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY, 600 delegates, alternates and advisers, listens to Trygve Lie's opening address (below). Big circle above dais is U.N. emblem; smaller circles will bear member nations' seals. Vertical striping of walls is caused by wood acoustical baffles, broken by horizontal slots for press and translator booths.

NEW TENANTS SETTLE DOWN

The U.N. builder let his imagination run in daring architecture and daring decorations. He commissioned a French artist, Fernand Léger, to design murals (opposite page) whose abstract gray, white and orange swirls provoked critics to cry "fried eggs." But he remembered that the real heart of a world capitol would be people and provided so sensibly for them that when they moved in they felt right at home.

To make the U.N. workshop workable, Harrison had provided printing plants, libraries, scientific traffic routing, room for 1,500 autos and their drivers. To make it livable he furnished a room for prayer in any faith, restaurants capable of serving 4,000 meals a day, air conditioning so adaptable to the tastes of 60 different nations that each second window has its own temperature control and, most important of all, plenty of places for delegates and diplomats just to sit and talk at their ease.

BLOCKS of wood, carved in Norway, form these massive doorknobs of Security Council. Torch and ribbon design is repeated for full height of doorway.

THE TWO BIG M'S

Maryland and Michigan State are at top of heap

This fall two big M's—Maryland and Michigan State—are the mammoths of intercollegiate football, terrorizing opponents with strong-arm tactics and demoralizing them with hocus-pocus. Neither has lost a game this season—or last season either. Last week they were running at the top of sportswriters' polls of the country's best teams.

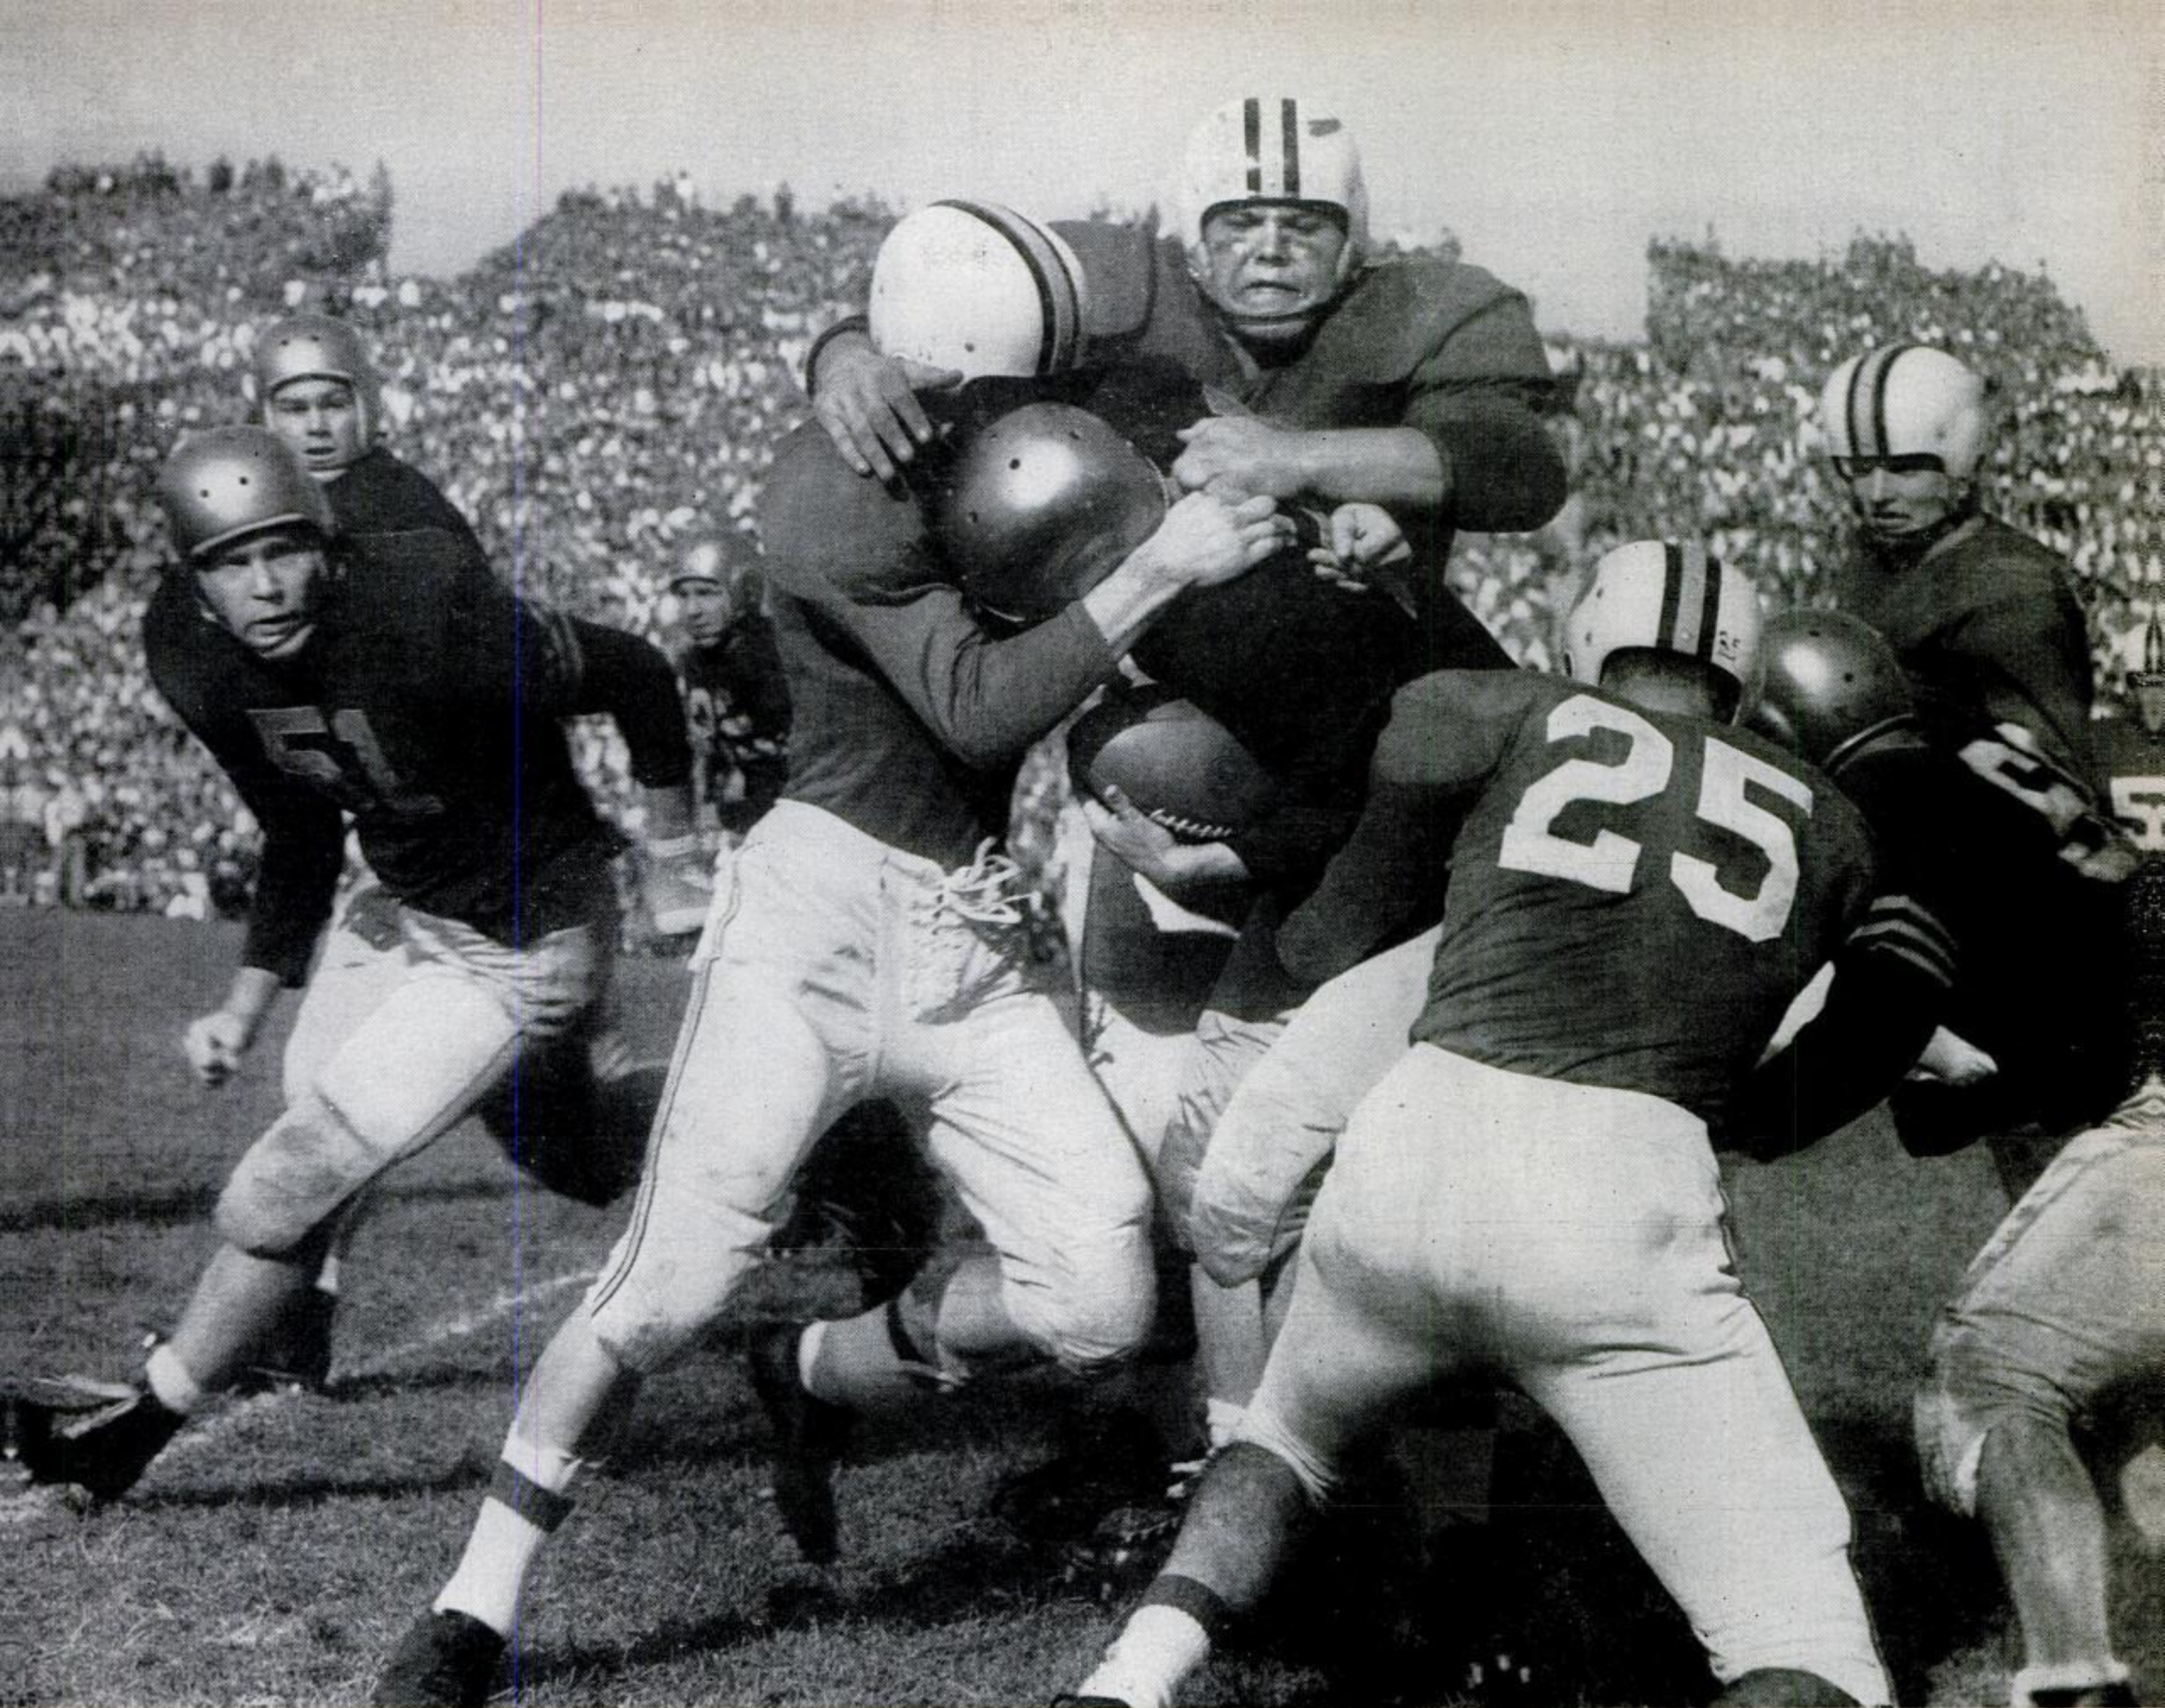

Both teams, whose chief trigger-men are shown in and out of mufti on these pages, are Johnny-come-latelies as big football powers. Maryland did not begin to develop real football ambitions until five years ago when President H. C. ("Curly") Byrd, an old football coach, went out to get a top coach (p. 124). Last year Maryland was suspended by the Southern Conference when Byrd defied its anti-bowl ruling and let his team play in the Sugar Bowl. Michigan State's rise to fame was boosted by an invitation three years ago to join the Big Ten, effective next fall. Its president, John Hannah, as head of a board investigating evils of the game, concluded that talent did not gravitate to a campus by accident. Though Michigan State's recruiting program is less intensive than at most other big colleges, talent just naturally seemed to gravitate there. Asked about it last week, Hannah explained, "It's a matter of embarrassment. . . . However I am very proud."

SPARTANS' HERO, Quarterback Tom Yewcic (pronounced you-sick) of Michigan State, throws dirty football togs into washing machine at laundry (above) and throws driving block (right) leading interference in Syracuse game. He also calls signals, handles ball on most plays and does the passing.

MODZELEWSKI GETS MAD and knocks a couple of heads together, including a teammate's, in the Maryland-Navy game. A great defensive lineman, he mutters to himself in Polish when he doesn't like the way things are going. He weighs 235 pounds without pads, and because he is near-sighted wears contact lenses in games.

WATCHING GAME MOVIE, COACH TATUM MAKES POINT TO AN ASSISTANT

COACHES BIG JIM AND BIGGIE

When Jim Tatum, Maryland's coach, talks about his team he mentions his linemen first: "No football team is going anywhere without something up front." Since coming to Maryland five years ago Tatum has concentrated on developing a rugged line which enables the backs to run up scores and take the bows. At Michigan State, where Clarence ("Biggie") Munn is coach, the accent is on "freshness above all else." He wants his boys to feel frisky and eager. He conducts rigorous pre-season conditioning, then cuts down to more gentle drills after the first game. His teams play interchangeably from single wing, double wing and T formations, but Biggie teaches so well that his teams shift from one system to the other without ever seeming to get confused.

Just ONE Minute!

You young folks have the right idea. Hair pulling helps give you healthier looking, more beautiful hair.

You should pull hair more often! It's a good health and beauty treatment for hair, unlike many things we do that take the life out of hair as they tend to remove essential natural oils. This is true of washing, bleaching, dyeing, drying, sunning and waving, to mention but a few.

And here's proof. Whatever is wrong with your hair, whether it's dry hair, cracked and splitting ends, hair breaking off, scalp dandruff or dull looking unmanageable hair, most people who know anything about hair will recommend some kind of an oil treatment—from the oil treatment you give yourself at home for three cents to the one given at a scalp institute for $5.00. And this oil-treatment idea is basically all right. But you must use the right kind of oil.

What help is a transfusion?

You couldn't give yourself a successful blood transfusion with red ink, and trying to give your scalp and hair an oil transfusion with any oil product which cannot be absorbed, is just as ridiculous. These products have as much to do with your skin, scalp and hair as red ink has to do with your blood. The proof that you can't count on help from these products is just this. No matter how long they are left on in the hope of benefit, the last thing done is to wash these oils out. Because these oils can't be absorbed—they can't do any good!

There is one oil that will penetrate the scalp; that can be absorbed by hair and scalp. And that is a natural, organic oil that comes from hair, just as your natural hair oils do. The name of that oil is lanolin and it comes from the wool of a sheep. It bears the same relation to that sheep's wool as your natural hair oils do to your hair. Lanolin, in its crude form, is greasy, gummy, and sticky. To be used on the hair, it must be refined and especially compounded for the hair. Only Charles Antell, in famous Formula 9, has mastered the secret of refining and compounding lanolin in such a way that sufficient quantities are absorbed by your hair and scalp. And that's why we can make you this proposition.

Unconditional Guarantee. Get Formula 9 at drug and cosmetic counters everywhere. Use it as directed. If it doesn't give you healthier-looking more beautiful hair in just ONE minute, return the jar and your money will be refunded without question.

MET'S TOP ITALIAN TENOR IS A JEWISH CANTOR NAMED RICHARD TUCKER

by WINTHROP SARGEANT

THE popular notion that Italians make the best Italian tenors rests mainly on a list of great exceptions in which the big names are ones like Caruso, Tamagno and Gigli. Actually a large part of the finest Italian tenoring has been done by such non-Italians as the great Jean de Reszke and the equally great John McCormack. It is not so surprising as it might seem, therefore, that when the Metropolitan Opera House opens its season Nov. 10, its best Italian tenor will be a Jewish cantor from Brooklyn named Richard Tucker.

Mr. Tucker, though he speaks it haltingly, can sing Italian with a faultless accent. Though he has been in Italy only once, he sings

Italian opera with a native passion and a garlic-scented abandon that gives the illusion of many generations of Neapolitan ancestors. He not only sounds like an Italian; he looks like one. For some time the Metropolitan management has been hopefully importing real Italian tenors to compete with him. Some of them have been pretty good. But the consensus has been that Mr. Tucker has outdistanced them all. The fact is that he often sounds more eloquent and more genuinely Italian than they do.

Meticulous critics might easily point out that Mr. Tucker's eminence is due partly to the mediocrity of his era. He is no Caruso. He seldom approaches the finespun elegance of McCormack. His voice is somewhat lacking in variety of color and sometimes sounds as impersonal as a trumpet. His acting, unless goaded by the most relentless direction, is strictly semaphoric. His appearance on the stage is apt to suggest a combination of General MacArthur and Lou Costello. But no tenor now at the Met can equal the combined agility, emotional fervor and power that Tucker's voice possesses. Though he speaks Brooklynese off the stage, he sings English with the polished accents of an Elizabethan actor. He can cope admirably with both the delicate lacework of Mozart and the bellowing emotionalism of Pagliacci. His voice, which started out (according to the time-honored classifications of the genus tenor) as a tenore lyric (or lyric tenor), grew and deepened into a tenore lyric spinto (heavy lyric tenor) and has now progressed to a tenore drammatico (dramatic tenor) so that he can handle such varied operas as Cavalleria, Trovatore, Pagliacci, Aida and even Otello. Already he is singing 20 roles with passion and extraordinary endurance, and Rudolf Bing, the Met's general manager, has conferred on him the prerogative of the opera house's leading tenor: he is given his choice of the best roles of the season.

Several things besides his voice make Tucker a remarkable phenomenon. As a cantor he is still the leading attraction in Chicago's Austrian Galician Synagogue, to which he commutes for the Jewish High Holy Days by plane, and where his appearances bring in a box office take of $25 a seat. Though his duties in the synagogue have recently become intermittent, he is still the highest paid cantor per hour in the U.S. Until only three years ago he was also a respected figure in the New York cloak and suit industry. His spectacular operatic career, moreover, is only seven years old, and aside from two appearances in Traviata with a small opera company, he has sung every one of his roles for the first time in his life on the Metropolitan's stage. This, compared with the gradual attainments of the average tenor who comes to the Met after years of experience in other houses, is an extraordinary feat. Just as extraordinary is the fact that Tucker has learned at least two operatic roles from scratch during every year of his career. As he puts it, "No use kiddin'. I don't pull my punches. You hafta cram; you hafta prepare."

The motive behind this rapid achievement is apparently neither a desire for fame nor a spirit of artistic dedication. Tucker is short (5' 8" tall), round, stocky (185 pounds), with a bald head, a surrounding fringe of glossy black hair and, without his toupee, the look of an energetic owl. He is inclined to view the unrealistic art of opera with the shrewd realism he once brought to the business of providing linings for fur coats. He knows that the more roles he masters the more money he makes, and he mentions with some satisfaction that his intake at present amounts to something over $50,000 a year. His present success he attributes to energy, single-mindedness of purpose and unremitting diligence. Being an intensely religious man he also attributes a good deal of it to God. "God blessed me," he remarks, "with a good memory and a keen mind." God also blessed him with a great voice, and his appreciation of this endowment is touching in its simplicity and sincerity. Tucker often spends long hours listening to his own phonograph records. "When I listen to myself sing Pagliacci," he muses, "I don't know whether I am man or beast."

Richard Tucker's dual life as a cantor and an Italian opera singer is not without conflicts. His congregation frowned upon his appearing at the Metropolitan on Fridays, Saturdays and Jewish holidays. Since Italy is a Catholic country and religion figures largely in Italian operatic repertoire, Tucker finds himself obliged to play a number of roles of an ecclesiastical or semi-ecclesiastical character. This causes him considerable worry and he has made a firm rule that he will not wear crucifixes on the stage, even when the part calls for them. But he is powerless to control the benedictions, exorcisms and other religious gestures aimed at him by his fellow actors. When, in Cavalleria Rusticana, he is blessed by his mother with the sign of the cross, Tucker quails inwardly, but he accepts it stoically as one of the inevitable hazards of his occupation.

As a noted Metropolitan tenor Tucker has, of course, received numerous requests for guest appearances at European operatic institutions, including La Scala and the Florence Music Festival. But the idea of international celebrity does not appeal to him particularly, and he has turned them down. On one occasion early in his career he did make a trip to Verona where he sang La Gioconda in an open-air performance before a huge audience of Italians. The Italians were enthralled to the point of frenzy, but their plaudits somewhat disconcerted Tucker. At the end of his big second act aria the audience rose to its feet and yelled "Bis! bis!" (encore). Tucker finished the act and then retreated backstage in some confusion. "I thought," he explained later, "they were hollering 'beast, beast!'"

In discussing his rise to fame and fortune Tucker deprecates the widespread notion that he became an opera singer more or less by accident. "I always knew, even when I was a kid," he avers soberly, "that the Metropolitan was my pinnacle." He was born 39 years ago in Brooklyn. His father, who had emigrated from Bessarabia (Romania), was a furrier in Manhattan's swarming garment district. The elder Tucker, who had a voice of some quality, would sometimes officiate as a cantor in the synagogue. He named his son Reuben (it was later changed to Richard for professional reasons), and the singer is still known to his friends as "Ruby."

As a boy he shot craps, excelled in school athletics as a baseball and basketball player and was a tackle on the football team at New Utrecht High School. He also sang with enthusiasm. By the time he was 6 he was singing alto in the choir of the Allen Street Synagogue, a venerable institution on a narrow ghettolike street on Manhattan's lower East Side. The synagogue's cantor, Joshua Samuel Weisser, soon took the boy under his wing, gave him vocal instruction and wrote special solos for him to sing. By the time Ruby was 13 his voice began changing and Cantor Weisser had to get himself another boy alto. After three years Ruby returned to the synagogue choir as a tenor, and before Tucker's mother died shortly afterward Cantor Weisser gave her his solemn promise to make Ruby a cantor.

But Ruby Tucker had other ambitions. On graduation from high school he got a job as runner for a Wall Street brokerage office where he became a first-hand witness to the stock market collapse of 1929. Chastened by this experience, he went to work as an errand boy in the garment district. Later he got together $3,500 in capital and opened a shop where he bought and dyed silk linings and sold them to the wholesale fur trade. He was what is known in fur circles as a "converter." "I was really a jobber," he says. "Converter sounds more important."

Tucker's affable personality as a salesman seems to have left a lasting impression on his colleagues in the garment district. "He could be one of the top men in the silk business if he wanted to come back," one of them recently remarked. But two things seem to have combined to push Tucker on to still more notable achievements. One was that wartime restrictions had put a crimp in the silk business and reduced his take to $25 a week. The other was a girl named Sara Perelmuth, whom he met at Coney Island. Sara Perelmuth was the sister of Jan Peerce, already a noted tenor. Her family was well-to-do and did not think much of a match with Tucker. But he sold himself to Sara. "Sara," said he, "I am just a budding rosebush. But I am going to bud." Shortly afterward they were married.

The budding process was rapid. Fired by rivalry with his brother-in-law, Tucker started taking lessons from the famous oldtime Wagnerian tenor, Paul Althouse, and studying assiduously for the operatic stage. Until his marriage he had never seen a performance at the Metropolitan Opera, and has seen very few from the dark side of the footlights since. Converter Tucker knew that Metropolitan tenors got good pay, so he concentrated on converting himself into a Metropolitan tenor, and Sara helped him. "God gifted us with vision," he says today reminiscently.

His teacher was amazed at the energy and cold method Tucker brought to his task. There was no sign of temperament. "Tucker just came for his lesson, took off his hat, sang, put his hat on again and went," Althouse recalls. Today Tucker still takes two lessons a week from Althouse and attributes to him a share in his gratitude that is exceeded only by those of God and his wife.

AS CANTOR Tucker sang at the Brooklyn Jewish Center. He started in choir when he was 6.

For several years Tucker stalked his goal with patience, energy and salesmanship. He entered the Metropolitan Auditions of the Air and came out second best. He got a job with the Chicago Theater of the Air on Station WGN in Chicago, where he sang condensed versions of opera and operetta. Finally in 1944, having refused to enter the Auditions of the Air a second time, he managed to get a full-scale audition with General Manager Edward Johnson on the stage of the Metropolitan. Johnson told him to learn the role of Enzo in La Gioconda and come back. A year later he made his Metropolitan debut in this role, and vast delegations from Brooklyn and the cloak and suit industry attended to applaud him.

His rise to eminence is perhaps best indicated by the critical reactions he drew from then on. After the Gioconda performance the critics mumbled vaguely, "Obviously inexperienced but he has possibilities," "... hasn't the true dramatic tenor's ping." Two years later, when he sang Rodolfo in La Bohème, the New York

COMIC TALENT in Tucker was brought out in Met's Così fan tutte, where as a phony Albanian, he rollicked on stage to confront Eleanor Steber.

RICHARD TUCKER CONTINUED

Times commented, "He played the part of the Bohemian poet with all the reckless abandon of a bank president." But two years after that, in 1949, the Times noted, "Mr. Tucker . . . is now among the finest tenors at large, and is still developing." By 1951 Critic Louis Biancolli of the World-Telegram & Sun pulled out the stops further: "Tucker once more demonstrated that if he continues singing as beautifully as he does, a new Mario Lanza will be signed up by Hollywood some day to do The Great Tucker." Then Noel Strauss of the Times went the whole way. "Not since Caruso," he wrote, "has this reviewer heard any tenor who delivered Rodolfo's music with more fervor or greater accuracy."

With the advent of the Metropolitan's new general manager, Rudolf Bing, Tucker found that his rather rudimentary capacities as an actor were scheduled for improvement and alterations. "Being an opera star," commented Tucker wryly, "isn't what it used to be. With Mr. Johnson, he wanted you to act, but with Mr. Bing you hafta act." Directing him in Fledermaus, Garson Kanin discovered in him an unexpected, indeed almost unbelievable, flair for comedy, a development that greatly encouraged Tucker, who had at long last severed all connections with the coat-lining business. In last year's production of Così fan tutte he came under the direction of Alfred Lunt. Said Lunt (according to Tucker): "Don't jerk around, Mr. Tucker."

"I got it right away," Tucker remembers enthusiastically. "Who says you hafta walk fast? Who says you hafta wave your arms? I'm just a student." He stopped walking fast and waving his arms, and everybody agreed that Richard Tucker looked better that way.

Tucker's director in the Met's production of Carmen, Tyrone Guthrie, hit upon a practical and simple solution to his dramatic problems. "Tucker," he noted, "is all right as long as you give him something to clutch." In Carmen, Tucker clutched a number of things including chairs, a dagger and Carmen herself, and, the critics agreed, did very well.

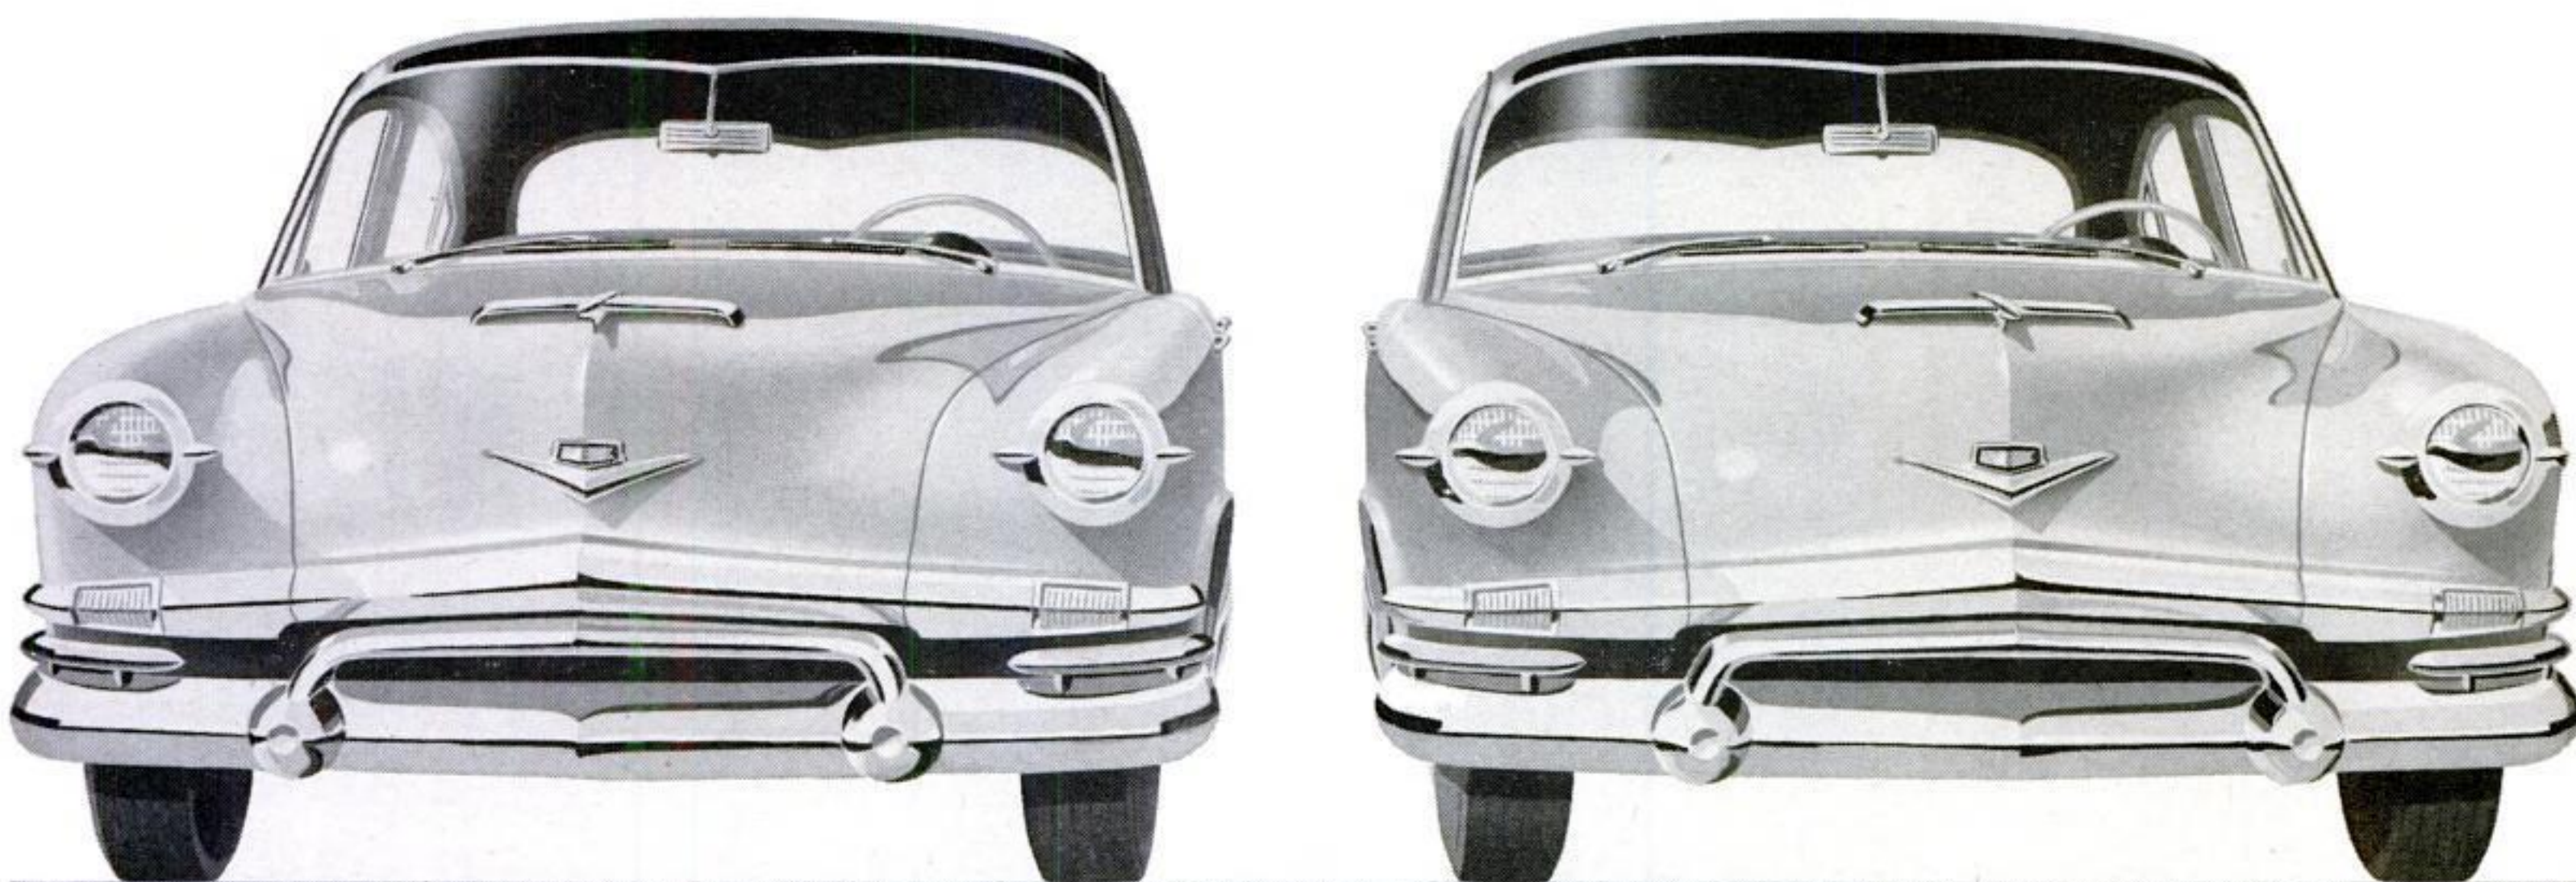

The biggest moment of his career, in his own estimation, came in 1949 when Arturo Toscanini chose him to sing Radames in Aida over the air with the NBC symphony. This role, which Tucker had not then (and has not since) attempted at the Met, offered him the fulfillment of a lifelong dream. He gave up all outside engagements for four weeks to prepare for it with his coach, Joseph Garnett. During rehearsals with the maestro he sang Celeste Aida with somewhat wooden efficiency. The maestro rapped for attention. "Mr. Tucker," he said, "do you love a woman?" Mr. Tucker was somewhat taken aback, and the question had to be repeated. "Yes," he finally admitted after an embarrassed silence. "Well, show it!" admonished Toscanini. "You're so morbid and sad."

Later, while singing the death scene at the close of the opera the same problem arose. "Why aren't you happy?" Toscanini inquired. "Maestro, I'm not happy; I'm dying," said Tucker lugubriously. "You are happy," contradicted the maestro. "She has sacrificed her life. You are dying with the woman you love. You are happy." Having accepted this poetic idea despite his native flair for realism, Tucker began singing like an angel. "At the end of the performance," he recalls, "I was in a different world."

Last year Richard Tucker moved from Brooklyn to occupy a new home in an elaborate housing development at Great Neck, Long Island. Here he has taken to dressing in rather loud, open-neck sports outfits and allowing his present prosperity to blossom appropriately. The Tuckers now have three children, all boys, who somewhat worry their father by their lack of interest either in music or in religion. His oldest son, Barry, 14, has a local newspaper route, and Tucker occasionally gets up early in the morning to drive him around in the family car while he delivers his papers.

Mrs. Tucker, a genial auburn-haired woman, appreciates her husband's attainments as an artist, attending all his performances, but thinks even more highly of his virtues as a solid citizen and family man. "He's always worked for his own family," she points out with pride. "He lives a normal life. He's been down to earth, and that's his greatest success that I can see." With this verdict Tucker himself happily concurs. The Tucker home is somewhat elaborately furnished in conventional style, with a special accent on peacocks, which adorn the walls and drapes. For himself he has constructed a den with intricate phonographic equipment and record racks where he can listen to himself and read a collection of rare Hebrew books relating to his work as a cantor. The walls of his den are decorated with photographs. These include two pictures of Caruso, one of Toscanini and 18 of Richard Tucker.

In his relations with the rest of the human race Tucker is a model of affability and friendliness. His home in Great Neck is a thoroughfare for admiring neighbors and acquaintances, and his wife Sara is, despite their present affluence, an assiduous and excellent cook. He has been known to take a taxicab to a restaurant and then, out of sheer good fellowship, invite the taxi driver to have dinner with him.

Tucker is very proud of such mementos of personal esteem as have been showered upon him by admirers. During the 1948 Democratic convention, Tucker was on hand to sing The Lord's Prayer and was presented with a badge reading "Honored Guest." He not only took the badge home; he managed, by persistent cajolery, to assemble three more "Honored Guest" badges and brought them home in triumph to his sons.

When he and Sara visited Verona, Italy (for his appearance in Gioconda) he sang at the Sabbath service of a local synagogue. When he had finished, the congregation, beside itself with gratitude, offered to make him a present of anything in the synagogue. Sara looked longingly at a golden cup which stood on the altar, but, realizing that it was the synagogue's most cherished possession, they settled for several ancient and priceless volumes in Hebrew which now adorn the den in Great Neck.

Three years ago Tucker was on his way to New Orleans to sing at a Puccini festival when raging storms grounded his plane at Newark airport. He and his wife remained there hopefully for more than 36 hours without sleep. In desperation they then caught a train for Cincinnati and connected with a plane which got them, bumpily, to their destination just one hour before the concert was to take place. Tucker was fagged out and had a two-day growth of beard. But, as he explains, "God was with us."

Since there had been no rehearsals, the local conductor was beside himself. Tucker went to a hotel and shaved. When the conductor called him on the phone in anguish and wailed, "But Mr. Tucker, I don't know how you sing. I don't know where you breathe," Tucker calmed him. "I always do what my teacher tells me," he said simply. "I sing the notes just like they are written." When he appeared at the concert hall a few minutes later, he was unperturbed. He removed his hat, walked onto the stage and sang. There wasn't a hitch. The audience applauded wildly and the conductor covered him with kisses.

This episode was one of many that testify to Tucker's enormous dependability, a quality that has made him a favorite not only at the Metropolitan but among all musical managers and fellow musicians. "When he says he will do something," his wife remarks, "he always does it." Before his Metropolitan appearances he leaves his home in Great Neck at 5 p.m., drives directly to the studio of his teacher to warm up, and arrives at the Met precisely an hour before the performance. He removes his hat, dons his costume and make-up and is ready to make his entrance exactly on schedule.

When the performance is over, he returns to Great Neck with the unruffled air of a methodical businessman who has put a good day's work behind him. At the Columbia recording studios (where he has recorded the complete operas Pagliacci, La Bohème, Fledermaus, Madame Butterfly and Così Fan Tutte) this calm dependability is looked upon with awe. He requires fewer retakes than do most other artists. His Pagliacci was one of the smoothest jobs of operatic recording ever done at Columbia. He simply sang his part through with scarcely a hitch or a blemish, and it was transferred to wax.

Only one thing can cause a feeling of panic in the otherwise methodical mind of Richard Tucker, and this is a threat to the commodity he deals in—his voice. A few years ago the commodity became strained through overwork, and he rushed around to various throat specialists in search of a cure. The incident produced a fear of catastrophe that was somewhat disproportionate to the actual state of affairs. "What if, God forbid, you are lying on a hospital bed for a lifetime?" he concluded gloomily. He didn't have to lie on a hospital bed. He simply stopped singing and talking for a period of a month or so, communicating with the outer world by means of anguished notes written on a scratch pad. After that the commodity was as good as new again.

Though he is a glamorous figure to millions of fans who think of him as inhabiting a glorious international world of operatic make-believe, Richard Tucker looks at it all as a man from Brooklyn doing a good job. The job has taken him halfway around the world, but he travels reluctantly and sees sights dutifully, without enthusiasm. Even in Great Neck he is unable to stifle completely his nostalgia for the streets of his home town. Asked recently what it was about Brooklyn that inspired this striking devotion, Tucker thought for a moment with a slightly pained expression. "But," he finally expostulated, "there's so much to see in Brooklyn."

IN THE FACE OF WORLD TENSION, America is again working against time to build up its Air Power. It is not for us to say how much Air Power this country should have—that is for your military leaders to recommend and Congress to decide. We do, however, feel a responsibility to help you understand the vast complexity of modern aircraft manufacture and operation so that you may realize why the job at hand takes so long and costs so much . . . and why America's security demands a long-range Air Power program in peace as well as war.

FLOWN TO FRONT-LINE POSITIONS BY SIKORSKY "FLYING TRUCKS", AN ARMY COMBAT UNIT UNLOADS SUPPLIES AND GOES INTO ACTION

YOUR ARMY IS TACKLING A LONG, HARD JOB— DEVELOPING SPECIALIZED AVIATION TO SUPPORT GROUND COMBAT

Since the early days of aviation, the U. S. Army has realized that one day, aircraft would move men and materials faster and more easily within combat zones than any means ever employed.

For years the Army has made use of fixed-wing aircraft for artillery spotting, liaison, wire-laying and other duties which were distinct from those of the Air Force. But the initial need was always there—for a "flying truck"; a versatile vehicle that offered mobility over impassable terrain and could be under the immediate direction of combat commanders.

The answer came with the development of big helicopters able to carry substantial loads.

The advantages are overwhelming. With helicopters, for instance, a rifle company needs no roads . . . fewer supply points . . . can ignore difficult terrain . . . and can accomplish vertical envelopment. Its wounded can be swiftly evacuated, its communications rapid, and it can cover much more ground than a motorized unit.

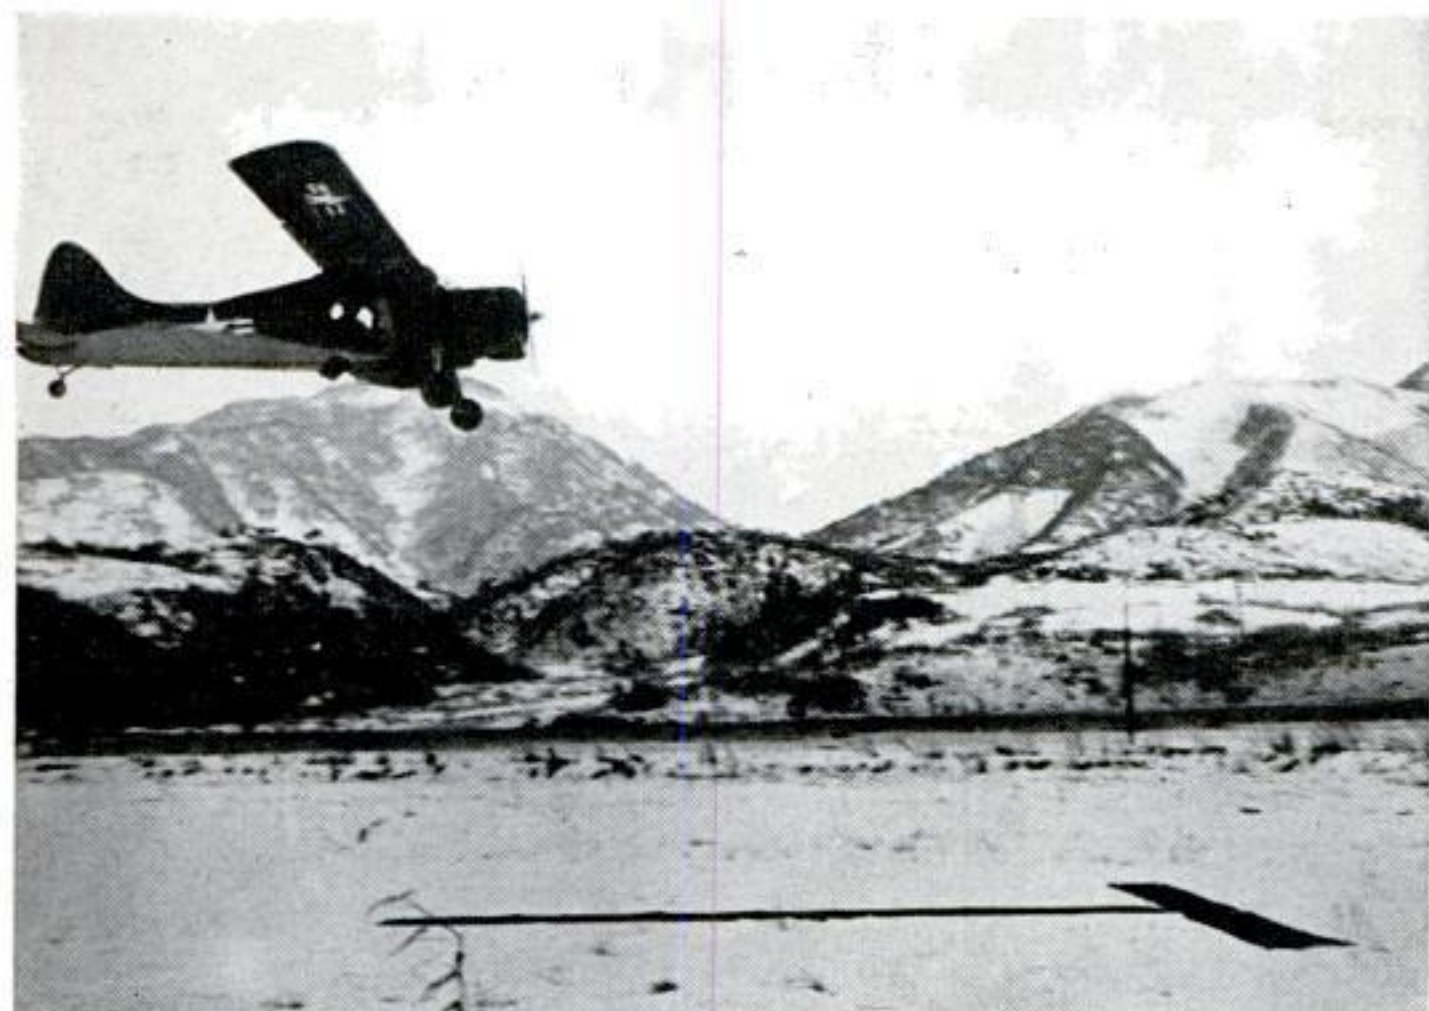

With both helicopters and fixed-wing aircraft, Army Aviation will be better than ever prepared to perform its vital mission of supporting ground combat.

But building Army Aviation is a long, hard job. Long-range plans call for doubling the 1,800 aircraft, 1,800 pilots, and about 2,400 maintenance men of today's Army. New and better types of aircraft must be developed by the industry, working in close cooperation with the Army. Possibilities of new ground tactics must be continually investigated. Add all this, and you can see what a vast and complicated job the Army is tackling in employing and developing this one phase of Air Power.

To succeed, the Army must have public understanding of the time needed to expand Air Power . . . and a recognition of the fact that Air Power must be consistently maintained in peace if it is to be relied upon to help prevent—or meet—the terrible emergency of war.

THE ARMY uses seven basic types of small fixed-wing aircraft in addition to helicopters. Such planes as the de Havilland "Beaver" shown above, are designed to operate from improvised airstrips in combat zones. They perform a variety of missions including reconnaissance, observation, patrolling, aerial photography, and transportation of key officers, emergency supplies and the walking wounded.

IN KOREA, the rescue of over 30,000 wounded and trapped men in helicopters flown by the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force (above: casualty being loaded on Sikorsky HO3S) pointed up the tremendous value of this type aircraft in saving lives. In addition to evacuation of the wounded, the Army plans to use helicopters for large-scale movement of troops and supplies, speeding reserves from rear areas, wire-laying, and many other special duties.

NEW CANDIDATES for Army Aviation training must first be officers in their own branch (such as Artillery or Signal Corps). They are given 18 weeks of flying instruction at San Marcos, Texas, and 13 weeks advanced tactical training at the Artillery School, Fort Sill, Okla. Helicopter pilots require an additional 10 weeks to train. Future plans call for making all Army aviators helicopter pilots.

ARMY FIELD FORCES are constantly investigating possibilities of new tactics built around the use of aircraft. Above, troops board Sikorsky H-19 in practice maneuvers which enable field commanders to closely integrate aircraft with specialized needs of various branches of the Army.

THE ARMY needs about three mechanics for every two aircraft it maintains and operates. Men are trained for four months at Fort Sill, then must spend eight more months in the field. Training is being steadily accelerated; presently it is more than double the pre-Korean rate. In the photo above mechanics are shown servicing Cessna L-19 on a crude airstrip in Korea.

YEARS OF CONSTANT development are needed before aircraft like Sikorsky H-19 helicopters (shown above) can be turned out in quantity on production lines. The Army's research and development branch works closely with the Air Force, the Navy and aircraft manufacturers to develop new and more efficient types it will need in the future. But only a sound Air Power Policy—and elimination of stop-and-go planning—can assure America of air strength to meet all emergencies.

In Louisiana, jambalaya is a stew which housewives make with shrimp, crayfish, oysters or anything else that is handy. When a Jambalaya Golf Carnival was held on one of the city courses in New Orleans recently, among a group of professional and amateur players, the game included baseball, pool, dice, jacks, marbles and football, as well as a little golf and a lot of horseplay. The general idea of the sponsors was to concoct a sports stew that would be both spicy and tough. The women players were asked to come dressed in costume, with prizes offered for the most outlandish outfits. The judges urged contestants to razz and heckle their opponents as much as possible, declaring, "It's to your advantage. Besides, it's something that you always wanted to do anyway."

CROSSED LEGS, a stance stipulated by game rules for players heading down seventh fairway, cause John Di-bold to kick up the dirt with his club. The patch over his right eye covers war wound.

FOOTBALLS are kicked off as substitute for usual drive. Second shots were made with regular golf balls from wherever footballs came to rest. At one tee

A BAD MISS is scored by Margie Minazzi, dressed in a harem outfit and sitting on a barrel, when someone sets off a firecracker just as she starts swing.

BEER CAN at the end of a six-foot pole is used by John Sarpy to putt at eighth hole as Dick Tarleton heckles. On one fairway players had to knock balls through automobile tire suspended in the air.

players threw dice to determine number of points they would get as a handicap. On one green, instead of putting, they played jacks to determine strokes.

A GOOD DUNKING is given Dave Goebel for winning tournament with a score of 59 for nine holes. One woman had a score of 47 on a single hole.

"I drink all the coffee I want..."

I get all the sleep I need!"

DON'T STOP DRINKING COFFEE...
JUST STOP DRINKING CAFFEIN!

YOU SLEEP better at night and feel better during the day when you don't drink caffeine. For it's the sleep-disturbing caffeine in ordinary coffee that keeps so many coffee-drinkers feeling tired, jittery and upset. And caffeine adds nothing to coffee's flavor.

That's why millions of wise coffee-lovers have switched to New Extra-Rich Sanka Coffee. It's 97% caffeine-free—gives you all the rich goodness of really choice coffee, yet can't irritate your nerves. Enjoy it today! Sleep tonight!

SUDS ON THE MARK

If they arrive early enough one morning a week, the tourists and amateur photographers who flock to the Top of the Mark, the bar on the 19th floor of the Mark Hopkins Hotel in San Francisco, have a chance to see the spectacular view of bay and city agreeably varied by the soapsud patterns of an intrepid window washer, Gaylord Ransom Jr. No member of the regular San Francisco window washers group will touch these particular windows, which are 257 feet above street level. Ransom has had the job for almost two years to supplement his income from his regular down-to-earth profession, which is selling real estate.
